

U.S. Atom Sub Circles World in 84 Days Under Sea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House announced today that the nuclear-powered submarine Triton had travelled 41,519 miles around the world in a historic 84-day voyage under water.

The Triton, largest submarine ever built, submerged off Montauk Point, Long Island, Feb. 16 and did not surface completely again until this morning off Rehoboth Beach, Del.

There, a helicopter picked up the Triton's commanding officer—Capt. Edward L. Beach of Palo Alto, Calif.—and flew him immediately to the White House where President Eisenhower conferred on him the Legion of Merit.

The Triton then proceeded to her home port of New London, Conn., where she was due Wednesday.

The historic voyage, known as "Operation Magellan," followed approximately the early 16th century course of the explorer Ferdinand Magellan whom history credits with making the first around-the-world cruise.

The 7,750-ton Triton, commissioned last Nov. 10, is about the size of a light cruiser and carries two atomic reactors and two entirely independent propulsion plants.

The Triton's skipper was Eisenhower's first naval aide at the White House. Beach has a distinguished record in the submarine service and is an outstanding author. His best-selling novel, "Run Silent, Run Deep," was a literary hit several seasons ago.

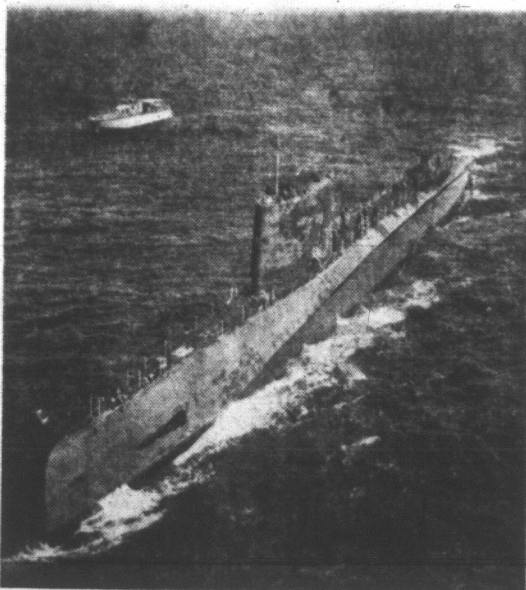

The President, in pinning the medal on Beach, hailed him for an "extraordinary accomplishment."

Beach was hustled secretly to the White House from his mammoth submarine which had surfaced before daybreak 12 miles off the Delaware coast.

His log had showed there was some difficulty with the submarine's diving planes and garbage ejection system and he was asked whether there were other difficulties during the trip.

"Yes, when the smoking lamp was out," Beach wrote, referring to a two-week period during the trip when smoking was banned by psychologists aboard the Triton.

"The psychologists suffered more than anyone else. They also like to smoke and the crew said they were a bunch of sadists."

The Triton was gone so long that 42 members of her crew were promoted while undersea and eight became fathers.

The vessel broached — partially surfaced — twice during the cruise, once on March 25 off the coast of Uruguay to transfer a critically-ill chief petty officer to the cruiser USS Macon, and again off Cadiz, Spain, on May 2 after the actual circumnavigation of the globe.

This particular surfacing was to pay homage to Magellan who sailed from Cadiz under the Spanish flag in 1519.

For the remainder of the voyage the Triton was completely submerged, mostly below periscope depth.

The round-the-world cruise was clocked from Montauk Point although the Triton sailed originally from New London. She proceeded first to St. Paul Rocks, a small island group 55 miles north of the equator and off the eastern tip of Brazil.

This, according to the navy, was the reference point for the actual circumnavigation, the point to which the Triton returned before proceeding to the Spanish coast.

She left St. Paul Rocks Feb. 24 bound for Cape Horn, but had to change course to transfer the petty officer, suffering from kidney stones, to the Macon. This put the Triton several days behind schedule and added some 2,000 miles to her journey.

She passed Cape Horn March 7 and set out underwater for Easter Island, passing about 1,200 miles south of Hawaii. She arrived off Guam March 28 and travelled thence to the Philippine Islands, passing near Magellan Bay where the 16th century navigator was killed.

The Triton sailed south toward Indonesia, passing through the Makassar and Lombok straits and west-southwest to the Cape of Good Hope. She went around the tip of Africa April 17 and returned to St. Paul Rocks April 25, thus completing her trip around the world.

CANADA'S ROLE IN DEFENCE

By TOM GOULD

OTTAWA — Over the past 10 years Canadian defence policies have been increasingly subordinated to those of the United States.

Today, Canada is a junior-grade military satellite of the U.S.

We have gone so far on the road to integration that a small group of U.S. congressmen can actually dictate the weapons that Canadian forces are to be equipped with.

Perhaps it was inevitable, considering the awesome power of the United States, that such integration would become a one-way street, that the word partnership applied to U.S.-Canadian defence would be a misnomer.

Evidence Clear

Anyone who doubts that such a situation exists should give careful study to the sorry story of the Bomarc-B anti-aircraft missile.

There are obvious reasons why Canada adopted the Bomarc-B for its "front line of defence," and not all of them have to do with the cost of the scrapped Avro Arrow interceptor.

A look at a map of North America will provide the explanation.

See how Ontario dips down into the Great Lakes, and how the lakes themselves push the U.S. border far to the south.

U.S. defence planners, who at one time envisaged a chain of Bomarc stations running up the U.S. west coast, along the border, and down the east coast, were very concerned at the Great Lakes Gap.

Move Inevitable

The only way to fill the gap was to get Canada to install Bomarc-bases of her own.

Did Canada want the Bomarc-B in the first place? A day or two before Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced Canada was going to obtain the missile, this reporter had a discussion with Defence Minister Pearkes in his Centre Block office.

The Bomarc came up in the discussion, and here is what the defence minister said about it: "I am not sold on the Bomarc."

The air force recommended against its acquisition, and there are recurring reports in Ottawa that the Defence Research Board told the government Bomarc would be obsolete before it was installed, if it managed to get airborne.

Certainly the alternatives were not pleasant.

The government could have continued the Avro Arrow interceptor program, at some fabulous cost; or it could have

Freeze-Up Eases Flood Danger

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP)—Freezing temperatures slowed the rise of the swollen Mattagami River today and spurred hopes that a critical flooding situation in suburban Mountjoy Township had passed its peak.

But emergency crews remained on a constant alert in Mountjoy where nearly 700 persons were evacuated from homes Monday, many of them by boats along streets swirling with up to six feet of icy, dirty river water.

The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission reported water at its key dam at Wainfleet Falls, 22 miles upstream, was holding its level.

The river was seven feet above normal at midnight, breaking the mark set in 1947, before many of Mountjoy's present residential areas were established.

Other areas of Ontario were also beset by floods. At Pembroke the Ottawa River reached its highest level in

Protest Made 'Pleasantly'

(Times News Services)

MOSCOW—The Soviet Union protested formally to the United States today about the flying spy mission of the American U-2 jet plane allegedly shot down over Siberia May 1.

A news conference held at the U.S. Embassy disclosed that a protest note over the incident had been handed to American Charge d'Affaires Edward Feneberg by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko during a "correct and pleasant" interview at the foreign ministry this morning.

But the circumstances surrounding its presentation indicated a Soviet softening of the propaganda barrage against the United States in view of next week's summit meeting in Paris.

U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson had a long talk with Khrushchev Monday night at a Czechoslovak reception in which he first broached the subject of seeing the pilot.

At the party, Khrushchev held Thompson's right hand between both of his while assuring the American he was positive Thompson personally knew nothing of the plane flight.

In a friendly tone, Khrushchev assured the ambassador that he felt sorry for him because of the spot he was put in as the U.S. representative. This contrasted with Khrushchev's blunt outspokenness to the Norwegian ambassador, Oscar Gunderson.

"You knew about these flights," Khrushchev said to the Norwegian diplomat. "I can see it in your eyes."

If intelligence missions are continued over Soviet soil, the premier said in a speech Monday night at a Czechoslovak Embassy reception, "we shall bring down the planes, just bring them down."

"If such flights are repeated, we shall take appropriate counter-measures."

Amid his taunts at the U.S. government and his warnings, the premier also sounded a conciliatory note, saying: "Our strength is being tested. Therefore let us not draw conclusions aggravating relations between countries, such conclusions as would hamper us in the future, even, I should like to say, in building good relations with the U.S.A."

FRANCIS POWERS ... to face court

RUSSIA TO TRY U.S. FLIER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Russia has informed the United States that the captured American spy pilot will be brought to trial under Soviet law.

The state department declined to make public the text, saying it believed Moscow would make it known.

Informed officials said, however, that the note advised that the pilot, 30-year-old Francis G. Powers, would be brought to account under Soviet law.

It also was disclosed that in return the United States has formally requested an interview with Powers.

Khrushchev has said that officials will be permitted to see Powers "in due course."

American officials said all that was contemplated was to ask about Powers' welfare, how he was treated and if he has legal assistance. There would be no "cross-examination" of him on accounts of the incident.

Coming immediately after Khrushchev's denunciation of the aerial intrusion over the Soviet Union, the letters underline Western confidence that the summit meeting will be essentially unaffected by the plane episode.

Will Fulfil Commitments With Allies

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States today pledged to support its Allies with force if Russia molests their bases for permitting U.S. reconnaissance flights.

State Department press officer Lincoln White said the U.S. would honor its commitments "for the common defence" of countries which "once again appear to be subjected to a policy of intimidation by the Soviet government."

The blunt statement was the U.S. answer to Soviet Premier Khrushchev's assertion that it more American flights are made over Russia from foreign bases "we shall hit at those bases."

Khrushchev declared at a reception in Moscow Monday night that Russia would shoot down any more U.S. planes invading her territory and would retaliate against other countries which let espionage planes use their bases.

White's remarks came as chairman Clarence Cannon of the House appropriations committee said that last week's ill-fated spy flight over Russia was one of a series approved by the White House and known in advance to key members of Congress.

He praised the Central Intelligence Agency for arranging the flights.

Cannon, one of a group of Congressional leaders briefed secretly Monday on the spy mission by top administration officials, told the House that in addition to the essential military information they turned up, the flights completely disproved Russia's claimed ability to stop American bombers at her borders.

He said the fact is the U-2 reconnaissance plane which Russia claims to have shot down last week "developed some unforeseen and unavoidable mechanical or physiological defect."

Secretary of State Christian A. Herter indicated in a statement Monday this country would continue reconnaissance flights until the Soviets agree to international safeguards against surprise attacks.

White's statement was made at a news conference today in answer to reporters' questions. He speaks officially for the state department.

White did not use the word force, but he made it plain that the United States would go to the defence of any country that came under attack as threatened by Khrushchev.

"It is typical," White said, "that the Soviet government singles out as the objective of its threats those smaller countries of the free world who bear no responsibility for the recent incident."

White said this meant the United States was exonerating Pakistan, Turkey and Norway from any responsibility in the flight.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — A 48-year-old domestic servant and his wife were left $100,000, the will of an 82-year-old widow showed Monday. Their two daughters were given $30,000 apiece for their education.

"I'd rather have her with me, she was such a dear sweet woman," William Denmon said. Mrs. John B. Wallis Jr., widow of a prominent industrialist, left the Denmons the $100,000 together with her automobile and household goods. She also said Denmon should live in her 12-room house in suburban Kingston, at full salary for a period of not more than one year while looking for other quarters and employment.

Spy Flights By Britain Says Paper

LONDON (Reuters) — A London newspaper says Britain has been flying spying missions over Communist countries, but that these now have been suspended until further notice.

The foreign office declined to comment on the report, carried by the Daily Express. The newspaper report says the flights were controlled by the foreign office through secret service, which was directly responsible to Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd.

It says the flights have been restricted to intrusions near the border of Communist countries, so that the planes could get back over friendly territory if challenged.

Spy Plane Incident Up Before UN 'Soon'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, Arkady Sobolev, said Monday night he expects to bring the case of the American U-2 shot down over Russia before the UN Security Council soon.

No one bothered to explain why, if the Arrow was obsolete against the diminishing, or the diminished—depending on what cabinet minister is talking—threat of the manned bomber, the Bomarc wasn't equally obsolete.

No one bothered to explain why Canada still clings to her ancient CF-100s in the home defence squadrons if both the Arrow and the Bomarc are obsolete.

It was learned that the CIA gets close to $400,000,000 a year for its world-wide intelligence work, under an arrangement so secret only a handful of congressmen know the sum and none knows exactly where all the money goes.

Plane Wreck Claimed Fake

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI)—The designer of America's U-2 airplane said Friday night he doubts Russian claims of having shot down one of the high-flying, long-range planes.

He believes instead that some mechanical failure of the mystery-craft might have allowed it to fall intact into Russian possession. Photographs of wreckage purporting to be of the downed craft were faked by Russia, he said.

C. L. Johnson, veteran Lockheed design engineer, based his statement on a close study of the photographs released by Russia.

"I am convinced that the Russians—for some reason have released pictures of some other airplane crash," said Johnson. He added the pictures probably were those of a wrecked Russian beagle bomber.

"I do not believe they shot down the U-2 either with a missile or another aircraft," said Johnson in a prepared statement released by Lockheed, maker of the craft.

"If they have the U-2 it is because some mechanical or oxygen failure caused it to descend far below its normal cruising altitude (reported to be at about 10 miles)."

Johnson designer of such other aircraft as the air force's F80 and the F104 jets, said the Russian-released photographs did not match the design characteristics of the U-2.

"Using the original wire picture, not one single U-2 part could be identified in the wreckage," said Johnson.

He said he based his doubt of the Russian claim of shooting down the craft on grounds that aerial photographs taken from the U-2 probably would have been destroyed in the wreckage, much of which appeared damaged by fire.

Johnson also noted crowds of Russian men, women and children were shown gathered around the wrecked plane in the Russian-released photographs. He said it was highly unlikely civilians would have been allowed so close to such an important craft, even if it had been wrecked.

It was his belief, Johnson indicated, that Russian technical and espionage experts have hidden away the U-2 wreckage for study.

CANADA GIVES U.S. A HINT:

'Stop All Spying Flights'

OTTAWA (CP)—Without having said it into words, Canada has made the suggestion to the United States that it halt spy flights over Russia.

Informants said today that the suggestion was implicit in the Commons statement by External Affairs Minister Green Monday that a continuation of such incidents might trigger a nuclear war.

In this way, Canada was telling the U.S. that it is strongly opposed to any further reconnaissance flights over Communist territory.

BLUNT AS POSSIBLE It is understood that Mr. Green tried to be as blunt as possible without giving offence to the U.S. and without presuming to interfere in an American administrative responsibility.

In other words, if the U.S. feels it must continue the spy flights there is nothing concrete Canada can do to halt them.

Washington reports said U.S. State Secretary Christian A. Herter had left the impression that spy flights might be continued.

Officials here are said to feel that in the world situation of today Washington should have tight control over such a delicate matter.

Authorities have often expressed a fear that a nuclear war might break out through miscalculation, such as the incorrect assessment of blips on radar screens.

IN PARLIAMENT

Live TV Coverage Of Debates Urged

(From Times News Service)

OTTAWA — MPs turned their criticism to themselves and the procedures of Parliament Monday, coming up with a wide range of suggestions for improvement, including live radio and TV coverage of proceedings.

A government motion to create a Commons committee to examine "changes that may be desirable to assure the more expeditious dispatch of public business" provided the springboard to the debate. The motion was unanimously approved at the night sitting.

Douglas Fisher (CCF—Port Arthur) raised the question of broadcasting Commons proceedings. As a start, he thought broadcasting an hour a week devoted to private members' legislation would help focus attention on Parliament.

Mr. Fisher found himself in agreement with J. M. Macdonnell (PC—Toronto Greenwood) in his expressed dislike for MPs reading their speeches in violation of the Commons rules.

Mr. Fisher said he believes the rule forbidding members to read speeches could be enforced if the party leaders laid down the law to their followers and ordered the party whips to enforce it.

Finance Minister Fleming, proposing the motion on behalf of Prime Minister Diefenbaker who is absent in Britain, placed at the top of the list of matters to be considered by the committee the question of closure, a parliamentary device to limit debate.

Closure of Debate Still Possible

Use of closure by the former Liberal government during the 1956 pipeline debate raised a storm of protest from the Progressive Conservatives who in subsequent election campaigns pledged themselves to remove it.

A motion dealing with closure was placed on the order paper in the 1957-58 session following the Conservatives' 1957 election victory but it was not acted on.

Mr. Fleming also suggested the committee consider a change in the system of voting and the adoption of agreements among the parties to limit the length of debates.

Roll-call votes, which take between 20 and 30 minutes to complete, now are used in the Commons. There have been suggestions that automatic voting machinery be adopted to speed up the process.

Hagen Argue, CCF House leader, said government supporters shouldn't complain about the amount of time used by opposition speakers. The Conservatives had started the practice of alternating a government speaker with an opposition speaker, whereas formerly two opposition speakers had a chance to speak after each government speaker.

The government received no prior information on recent U.S. congressional recommendations to cut spending on the Bomarc-B anti-aircraft missile, Defence Minister Peckham said. No information passed between the Canadian government and the U.S. House of Representatives appropriate-tions committee that proposed the reduction, he said in the Commons. There had been no consultation between them.

Mr. Parkes made the comment when questioned about statements made following a weekend visit to Boston by Canadian legislators and businessmen who talked unofficially with American counterparts on international relations.

Douglas Jung (PC, Vancouver Centre) denied an opposition suggestion that the legislators, all Progressive Conservatives, travelled by government plane. Mr. Jung, unofficial leader of the group, told George McIlraith (Liberal, Ottawa West) that each member paid his own way.

"There are no words in the English language which would allow me to run down the CPR at this time," said Tom Uphill, 85-year-old member of the Legislature since 1920.

He was speaking on a motion by the Nelson Chamber of Commerce asking for resumption of daily rail service between Vancouver and Medicine Hat, Alta. The motion was defeated.

Mr. Khrushchev Calling the Shots?

Next Monday in Paris, the president of the United States and the prime minister of Britain and the Soviet Union sit down for talks at the summit. In this first of a series of four articles, AP news analyst William L. Ryan reports on the Communist position as the time for the conference nears.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Approaching the summit, Nikita Khrushchev seems brimful of confidence that he cannot lose—and the West cannot win.

The Communist approach to the four-power Paris meeting next week indicates a belief that Khrushchev "bullied" a weak and irresolute Western alliance into a meeting it did not want, and thus will be calling the shots.

Moscow has reason for confidence. Even deadlock at the summit could be hailed as a success for Soviet propaganda. Moscow seems studiously preparing for failure of Khrushchev's meeting with Prime Minister Macmillan, President Eisenhower and President de Gaulle to achieve any noteworthy contribution to peace.

Deadlock on Berlin

There is little hope for agreement on the questions of West Berlin and divided Germany. Moscow has rejected the West's idea of free elections for all Berlin. Unquestionably, Moscow will reject free elections as a prerequisite for peace treaties with East and West Germany.

On disarmament, Khrushchev's proposal for total, universal disarmament is less a proposal than a gambit. Every Western proposal is rejected out of hand with the re-echo: "The West wants controlled armament, not disarmament."

Thus, the four leaders seem to be meeting not for the sake of agreeing, but for the sake of meeting.

Has Khrushchev been calling the shots for the summit?

When he and President Eisenhower agreed last September to a summit meeting, U.S. understanding was that there would be no fixed agenda. Five months later at a Warsaw pact meeting the Russians laid down an agenda: Disarmament, the Berlin-German questions, nuclear weapons tests and East-West relations.

Later, Washington dispatches pictured Western foreign ministers, preparing for the summit, as "hoping" it would take —once said: "A part of everything you earn is yours to keep!" He insisted that his sons and grandsons save one shekel out of each ten they received in wages or trade.

He knew through experience that a man who permanently puts away ten percent of all he earns, never needs to throw himself upon charity ... and can spend the remaining 90% as he pleases. Today many men "compel" themselves to save away about 10% of all they earn for their old age, the emergencies of life and the replacement of family income if death strikes unexpectedly, by investing in long-term permanent personal policies of life insurance.

The Higher Brinkmanship

THE FULL STORY OF THE American espionage plane has yet to be told. Until all the details are known, as they certainly are not known now, a final judgment on this whole incident must be suspended. But in the meantime it is useless to pretend that the prestige of the United States and its President have not received a serious blow throughout the free and the neutral world.

The American people and all foreigners are asking themselves today why, on the eve of a Summit conference to ease world tensions, an American agent is ordered to fly from Pakistan to Norway across Russia. The American people are also asking themselves how they would regard a Russian plane crossing their country from, say, Mexico to Norway.

It is well known, of course, that all great powers are engaged in espionage and need not apologize for it, in the present disordered state of the world. But to violate the airspace of Russia, to photograph its military installations, to invite the destruction of an American plane, and then, at first, to deny that any such project was under way—all this is quite inexplicable at the very moment when the President of the United States is about to meet the Prime Minister of Russia for the purpose of easing world tensions.

The Russians acted in this case precisely as the United States or any other great power would act. They shot down the American plane, or so they say. At any rate, they captured it and its pilot. With the evidence thus gathered they were able to score one of the largest propaganda coups in the history of the cold war.

For they are now able to say—however unfair it may be—that the United States is insincere in its professions of peaceful intent. The neutral world may not understand the nature of the power struggle in detail; it can understand that an American agent flew over Russia and was captured red-handed. For Mr. Khrushchev the whole incident was made to order.

But who made it? That is the baffling question. The American Government denies that it ordered the flight from Pakistan to Norway. This denial, no doubt honest, must raise even graver doubts about American brinkmanship.

If the American Government did not give the orders and did not know that they were given, who in fact is conducting the high policy of the United States abroad? Are its activities on the brink under the control of its civilian Government or not?

By admitting, with his usual candor, that an American spy plane was caught by the Russians but denying that he ordered it into Russia, Mr. Eisenhower has placed himself in a difficult position as he approaches the Summit. Perhaps unfairly, his moral position as the leader of the free world and the advocate of peace, has been gravely undermined in the neutral, and undoubtedly in some parts of the free world.

The fact that the political prospects of his party in this year's election, and probably the personal prospects of his heir, Mr. Nixon, have been damaged, is a relatively small matter and entirely the business of the American people. For the world the important question is whether the Summit conference can now succeed, even in its very modest prospects, when Mr. Khrushchev is in a renewed mood of moral indignation and, for the first time, has the facts on his side?

After such a fiasco it is still more difficult to understand the decision of the American Government—deliberately announced at this critical moment—to resume the testing of nuclear explosions. To be sure, no military weapons are to be tested but again the Russians will be able to say, however unfairly, that it is the United States which has resumed the nuclear race and compelled its competitors to do likewise. And this though an agreement to halt all tests was the single big hope of the Summit conference.

To that conference there could hardly have been a worse overtone, for American leadership a worse blow. But surely these events cannot have been as accidental, ill-managed and tragically absurd as they appear on first sight. The free world which trusts him, the neutral world which has rightly regarded him as a man of peace, will await the President's full explanation with anxiety.

Counsel of Perfection

LE CONSEIL DE LA VIE FRANCAISE en Amerique recently presented some counsels of perfection to the Canadian Government. It said that no Canadian diplomat should be posted abroad without a knowledge of the French language.

Certainly that knowledge would be valuable in many parts of the world, especially Europe, but some of our best diplomats seem to get along pretty well without it. And if bilingualism is made compulsory overnight we shall bar from our diplomatic service some of its ablest men.

Obviously the Government will not attempt to enforce any such rule at the top, but it is being enforced at the bottom, among the new recruits.

The external affairs department appoints few, if any, men or women for future foreign service unless they are fully at home in French. And the recruit's prospects will be even better if he knows some other foreign language.

As a new generation of diplomats takes over, the language problem, at least so far as French is concerned, will solve itself, provided the Government avoids the temptation to fill our embassies with political appointees from outside the civil service.

Fortunately this temptation has been generally avoided in modern times by all our governments. By and large we are excellently served abroad by trained men of the highest abilities.

Little General Election

APPARENTLY CANADA WILL witness a little general election before the end of the year. The Quebec and Nova Scotia Governments will go to the polls before midsummer. The Government of Saskatchewan is expected to follow. New Brunswick may not be far behind. And the British Columbia Government evidently is planning an election in early autumn.

Five provincial elections, from coast to coast, and including the French Canadian province of Quebec, will provide a broad cross-section of Canadian political opinion and will be watched with anxious attention by the federal politicians in Ottawa.

As history has shown, a provincial vote does not necessarily forecast any province's vote in a later federal election, but on the other hand a national party cannot prosper for long if it is weak in the provincial grass roots.

Is the Diefenbaker Government slipping in the grass roots? Is the Liberal Opposition gaining there? This, in a rough way, is the question which the little general election will answer before many months have passed.

From Pole to Pole

IT WAS BOUND TO HAPPEN sooner or later, no doubt, although we might have expected the move to come from big-thinking Texas or Alaska rather than from Washington.

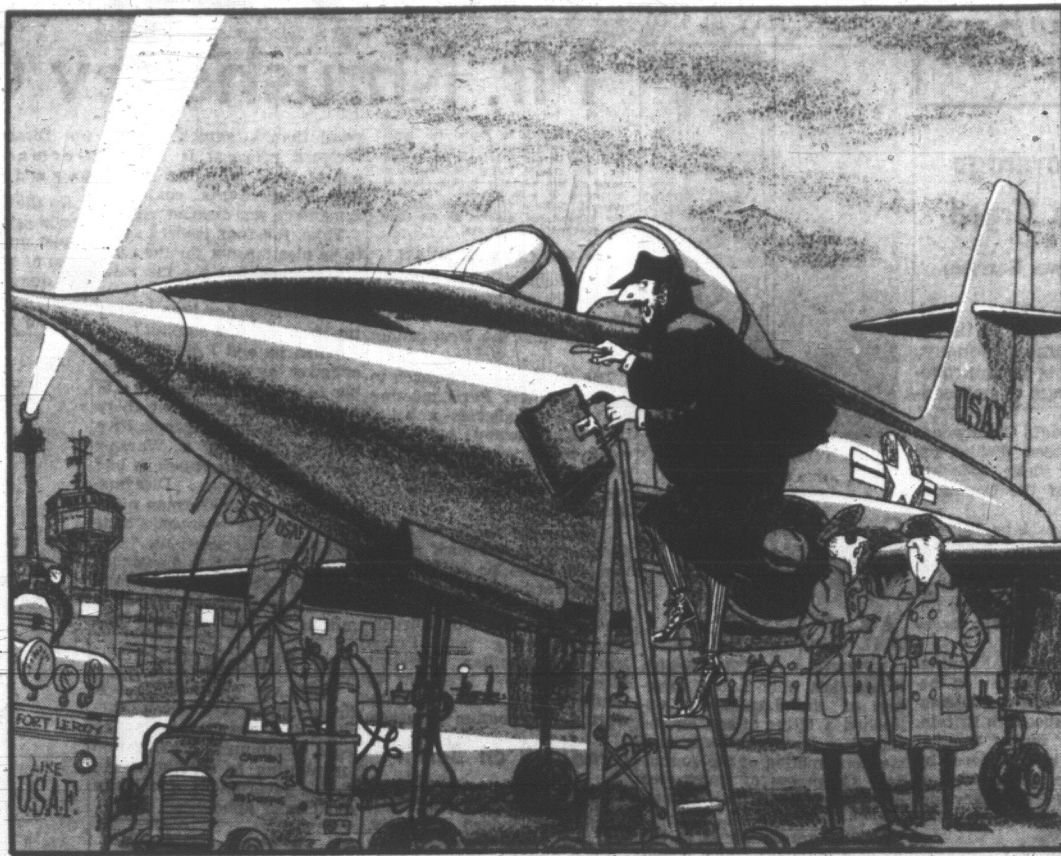

An Indian carver in the neighboring state plans to create a 130-foot totem pole that would top the present World's Tallest Totem Pole of 127 feet, seven inches, which stands in Beacon Hill Park.

It is only a plan as yet, and there is many a slip between the adze and the completion. But even at this point the project appears to be nothing more than a competitive attempt to achieve notoriety by exceeding our pole by hardly more than a nominal footage—two feet, five inches, to be exact.

Certainly the ambition of the Washington chieftain cannot depreciate our ability to grow tall cedar trees, nor the wood-working verbosity of our carvers. We feel sure that the tribal story to be told on the Washington totem could be edited down to a mere 125 feet or less, but this is not likely to happen.

The tall pole, as we see it, is being planned for only one purpose: to provide an opportunity for tall stories. Against this there is no defence.

"Hansom cabs . . . champagne suppers . . . beautiful Mata Hari . . . what wouldn't I give to go back to the good old days . . ."

LOOSE ENDS

MR. PERCY M. FOX, president of the St. Lawrence Corporation, estimates conservatively that last year Canada's premium dollar caused its exporters a loss of about $225 million.

As he says, the exact figure cannot be reckoned and against the loss, whatever it may be, we must place the gain of imports bought at a discount in terms of our own currency. However the figures may be calculated, nearly all Canadians will agree that the high-priced Canadian dollar is a serious obstacle to our exports and prosperity in general. The only question is how the premium can be reduced or removed, and the cure for this trouble will be seen in its cause.

Our dollar has been worth more than that of the United States not because we are selling more abroad than we buy—the normal reason for a rise in any currency—for we are selling far less.

But our dollar, which otherwise would be at a sharp discount, has been held at a premium solely because so many foreign investors, mostly Americans, are bidding for it. And they are bidding for it because they are buying Canadian securities, public and private. The cure for the premium then is obvious—we have only to increase our exports or borrow somewhat less from foreigners or do both these things together.

Mr. Fox suggests that we might set up some central authority to control foreign borrowings, not by arbitrary measures but, apparently, by expert advice to borrowers and moral suasion, applied especially to provinces and municipalities.

Common Sense Could Cure the Dollar

ALTERNATIVELY he proposes a new federal agency which, like the Industrial Development Bank in another field, would loan Canadian money to junior governments and discourage them from going to Wall Street for American money.

Whatever the merits of such ideas may be in theory, they are not practical politics in Canada. Short of an acute national emergency, no national government is likely to involve itself in bitter political quarrels with provinces and municipalities by discrimination between their demands for loans.

This does not mean that nothing can be done about the premium dollar. Something, indeed, has been done already without official regulation. The reduction of the federal Government's prospective borrowings this year has left more Canadian money available to junior governments and private corporations.

THE compulsion driving them to foreign lenders has been at least reduced. Perhaps for this reason, or for others, the premium has fallen quite substantially in recent weeks, though the fall may prove to be only a temporary fluctuation.

It is clear anyway that the international value of our dollar is so sensitive that it instantly moves up on the pressure of foreign borrowing or down as the pressure is relaxed, even slightly.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

If we desire a lower-priced dollar we can have it almost overnight, provided we import less capital.

For this purpose no elaborate new machinery of government is needed, no extension of bureaucratic controls, no legal limitations on the policies of junior governments or private corporations. All we need is a little thrifty common sense, a typical old Canadian virtue, not always conspicuous in recent times.

COMMON sense would tell all organs of government and all businessmen (though it has not so informed Mr. Churchill up to now) that the accumulation of foreign debt is placing too heavy a mortgage on our future. It would tell them that the cost of providing interest payments in foreign currency is becoming too high in total.

Finally it would tell them that after borrowing in premium dollars today they may have to repay, at heavy extra cost, in discounted dollars tomorrow.

Already, indeed, every Canadian government or business that borrowed last year in the United States is now paying increased interest as our dollar has slipped.

Common sense will assert itself in governments when they balance their budgets and hold down their borrowings for capital purposes to reasonable amounts: in business concerns when they raise their capital as far as possible within Canada and spend it constructively, to increase actual production; in private investors when they are as ready as foreigners to put their money into sound but risk-taking Canadian enterprises.

THE MIDDLE EAST ALLIES

Nasser Got Syria On a Silver Platter

DAMASCUS — What do Canadians think of Gamal Abdel Nasser? The questioner was a well-dressed Syrian youth I met by chance in the Grand Mosque, where lies the head of John the Baptist. It was the first thing he wanted to know when I said I was a Canadian.

I told him there were different opinions about the President of the United Arab Republic in Canada. Not so here in the Syrian or Northern Region of the U.A.R., he said, launching into a glorious eulogy of The Great Man.

Did Canadians know that for two years Syria had been linked with Egypt in union, did they know how proud Syrians were of their president?

A five-day visit here gave this Canadian lots of evidence to back up the young man's words. Among the youth, in the schools and university, President Nasser is today's prophet. So he is for the Arab masses. On "the street called straight," in the bazaars, you see thousands of pictures of the president, even more than you do in Cairo.

It is Nasser the boss-man, and Nasser the symbol of Arab nationalism that gives meaning to the union of the two geographically separate nations.

Ask a Syrian what he thinks of the union and he will talk only of the president. Persist and he may admit that he doesn't like Egyptians, that he considers them a much inferior race. He may grumble about Egyptians taking over government jobs. But never does he voice opposition to the union on the grounds of Syrian nationalism.

Strong Man

Baathist leaders in Syria handed over their country to the Egyptian president on a silver platter early in 1958. Their threefold reason—perennial political chaos allegedly endangering Syrian independence from the Communists on the one side and the "imperialists" on the other—still stands. Long in the vanguard of the pan-Arab movement, Syrians wanted a strong man to ensure stability at home and prestige abroad. In Gamal Abdel Nasser they got him—and they like it.

Most of them, that is. Even in this police state, grumbling can be heard. Most of it is from the middle class—merchants hard-pressed by growing economic difficulties, former politicians who can no longer sit in cafes plotting coups d'etat.

At this stage it is difficult to assess the economic effect of the union. Deterioration has been real but it is to be blamed not on Egyptians but on two successive crop failures resulting from lack of rain. The outlook for this year is just as dismal.

Nevertheless imported consumer goods are still to be found in the stores—more than in Cairo. Trade with Iraq and the Persian Gulf has been brought to a standstill by the Nasser-Kassem feud, but the more important trade between the two provinces of the U.A.R. has increased by leaps and bounds.

Comparatively speaking, Syria is a surplus, exporting economy while Egypt is a deficit, importing economy. But because of the crop failures in Syria, Egypt, thanks to the aid it receives from the United States, West Germany and the Soviet Union, has been able to help with credits and aid.

Syrians appreciate this but they can hardly be happy that the gap between their formerly higher standard of living and the lower Egyptian one is steadily narrowing.

President Nasser has been wise in pursuing his policy of economically uniting the two provinces slowly. The method has been a pragmatic one of trial and error. An early idea of sending several thousand peasants from overcrowded Egypt to Syria has been quietly dropped. The much talked about unification of currencies has been postponed several times—now more or less indefinitely or until the two economies reach equal status.

Should the president hurry the process of economic unification he could well expect opposition from the Syrian merchants. This was one of the reasons for the unpopularity of the Syrian Baathists.

Because they increased Syrian duties and restrictionism on the Egyptian model after the political union, their recent removal from the government by President Nasser—for his own political popularity—has won him additional Syrian popularity.

Unchallenged as he is at present in Syria, the months ahead will not be easy ones for the president of the U.A.R. If the economic situation continues to deteriorate it may take more than prestige with the masses to hold the country in the palm of his hand.

Politically, the early experiment of working with the Baathists has failed. The men who brought union about are now displaced, lying low—waiting.

Originally forced upon him, the union is now his hostage to fortune. Nasser's position at home, in the Arab world and abroad, depends to a large extent on the union's success. At the same time the union's preservation depends on maintaining his prestige at home, in the Arab world and abroad.

Southern Invitation

By MAURICE WESTERN

"IT IS our intention," said Mr. Green during the general debate on foreign affairs, "to pay special attention to Latin America." This special consideration has now borne fruit in two decisions announced by the Prime Minister in Mexico City. Canada is to be represented by an observer at the next meeting of the Organization of American States, to be held next year in Quito.

Meanwhile Mr. Green is to investigate the problem of the southern states during his forthcoming visit to South American capitals with a view to making recommendations to cabinet. He is already on record with the comment that we have been "stand-offish" in our attitude to the Latin Americans and that we ought to strengthen our relations with them.

It is certainly the case that successive Canadian Governments have been reluctant to plunge into the waters of hemispheric politics.

Less Responsive

The Conservatives, until recently, were probably less responsive to Latin overtures than the Liberals. The CCF have shown intermittent interest but Mr. Coldwell, after experience at international meetings, changed his view and argued that Canada could play a more important role outside the Pan-American organization than as a member of it.

In the early 1950s the question of participation was considered by the Liberal Government but the predominant view was that the disadvantages of membership outweighed possible gains to this country.

The new Conservative approach is somewhat puzzling because the arguments against participation would appear to be as strong now as they were when the matter was last considered by the St. Laurent Government. Two main considerations weighed, and presumably still weigh, against a Pan-American policy for Canada.

In the first place membership would tend to involve us, not only in disputes between Latin American countries, but also in those dividing the Latin countries as a group from the United States.

Until the mid-war years American policy opposed Canadian participation for reasons never very clearly defined but stemming from a vague apprehension that it would introduce a European influence into the affairs of the Americas and so undermine the traditional Monroe Doctrine.

After the war this American policy was reversed and Canadian membership was desired both by Washington and by the Latin republics but for opposite reasons.

Restraining Influence

In brief, the United States looked with favor on Canadian participation because it hoped that this country would exert a moderate and restraining influence on the often troublesome Latin states. The Latin republics, in contrast, looked for Canadian support in resisting United States pressure upon them or, in other seasons, of developing more effective pressure upon the United States.

Latin regard for Canada thus appears to be mounting; leaders or foreign ministers of at least three of the republics, Mexico, Brazil and Venezuela, have publicly expressed the hope that Canada will enter the OAS.

While this attention is flattering to Canada it does not materially alter the basic situation.

To those who would urge caution on Mr. Green hemispheric solidarity is a somewhat artificial concept. They point out, for example, that we have far greater affinities with the Scandinavians than with the Argentines and that, if we must have a hemispheric setting, the equator is a more natural perimeter for us than some north-south line through the Atlantic Ocean.

There is no question as to our eligibility for OAS, republican status not being a condition of membership. It is not at all clear, however, what commitments we would be required to accept to qualify as Pan-Americans in good standing.

Free Trade Area

For a number of years we have participated in various subsidiary organizations such as the Pan-American health organization and the inter-American statistical institute. We might even, it appears, become members of the inter-American free trade area now in the making—without thereby joining OAS.

This is one side of the coin. The other is that we could join OAS without at the same time accepting responsibilities in all the various subsidiary organizations.

But could we become members of OAS without subscribing to the Rio de Janeiro collective security treaty, the inter-American defence board or the inter-American development bank? Legally, the position is obscure. Practically, membership would appear to be pointless if we remained aloof from the principal activities of the inter-American organization.

There is, of course, no conflict between the collective security obligations of OAS and the general obligations of UN membership. But states enlisting in a regional organization accept a more specific responsibility for the maintenance of peace in the region.

It is unlikely, in the present circumstances, that Canada would ever be required to act as an agent of the United Nations south of the Rio Grande. As a member of OAS she would be an obvious candidate in such situations, as a country relatively detached from Latin discords and less suspect than the neighboring great power.

Selecting Hearing Aids

and Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation.

I was just reading a book by Dr. Norton Canfield, of Yale University, called "A Hearing Handbook for Laymen" (Doubleday). As the doctor points out, in the last few years, hearing aids have been getting ever smaller and more efficient. Now, they can give back a useful and interesting life to most hard-of-hearing people. Curiously, not all who are now hard-of-hearing seem really to want to hear better. When people try an aid, they hear a lot of queer and strange sounds, some of which they do not like.

Alvarez

The aid will enable the person to hear voices, but these voices will probably not sound quite like they used to. Their timbre will be changed. Few people like their aid at first; it will take them a while to get used to it. The selection of the best aid for the individual may take some time, and expert help may be needed.

A person using an aid should go occasionally to try out a new one because each manufacturer is constantly making improvements. Before going to choose an aid, one should get an audiometric test which will show just what sort of hearing loss one has. The expert can tell from the record how much difficulty the patient is likely to have in getting an aid that will help him.

Dr. Canfield advises the patient to deal only with well-established firms which are responsible and kindly, and have a reputation to sustain. In choosing a suitable aid it is helpful to listen to familiar music. Some persons with a very sensitive skin may not be able to tolerate something inserted in their external ear canal. Often the "insert" that goes into the ear canal should be molded to fit. Even small air "leaks" around it can cause squeals or imperfect hearing. Rubber "washers" can sometimes solve the problem.

The otologist (ear specialist) who measures the hearing in the two ears can decide whether the person needs two aids or only one. Occasionally, the cleaning of much wax out of the ear canals will restore hearing.

A person with good hearing in only one ear can be much handicapped in a crowd where everyone is talking. Two aids, one in each ear can often give so-called binaural or stereophonic hearing, which is very helpful.

Some 5 per cent of people need to use a "bone conduction aid." Such bone receivers need a lot more electric power than do air receivers. Some persons can hear sounds better with an aid, but they cannot make out words as well as they would like to.

Dr. Canfield thinks that people who must think of expense can often get by with one of the cheaper aids. The smaller the aid the smaller will be the batteries and hence the more often they will have to be renewed. The expense per year for upkeep can be anything from $5 to $50. In some places there are hearing centres where the person can try several makes of instrument. It is well for the hard-of-hearing person to take with him a relative or friend when he goes a-purchasing. This may save misunderstandings and trouble.

How long will an aid last? Dr. Canfield advises changing every three to five years. It is good to keep taking advantage of the constant improvements being made. The person should get a year's guarantee, and he should find out if in his city he can get service and parts and batteries. This is very important. The buyer would often do well not to be too vain, and hence too anxious to get the smallest possible instrument. People who are hard of hearing should remember that their deafness can be even more obvious than would be a hearing aid! Why not, then, get the aid that gives the best hearing?

I personally, always feel extra kindly to the person with a hearing aid; I guess I am glad to see that he had the good sense to wear the apparatus. But, actually, he did not need much sense; I have worn glasses for the last 66 years, and I never even know I have them on.

The wearing of them never embarrassed me for a minute. They make an active and useful and rich life possible for me. Similarly, if I should lose much of my hearing, I would gladly wear an aid because it would bring me sounds, speech, music, laughter, fun, and enriching contacts with the world.

The aid would keep me from growing solitary, and perhaps eccentric and suspicious and crabbed. It would enable me to hold fast to my friends, and it would enable me to hang onto my job which makes life worth living for me.

FAITH BIG NEED MONTY DECLARES

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Western world needs leaders with a faith in Christianity as strong as the Communists' faith in communism, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery said Monday night.

"Our task today is to inspire the youth of the British Commonwealth with a common moral purpose," he said.

A leader must have moral integrity, courage, sound judgment, vision, enthusiasm, ability to get along with and inspire fellow men and a high intelligence, he said.

Then he mentioned juvenile delinquency — "a more convenient expression for parental neglect," he called it — and said:

"The most important thing in the education of our youth is a sense of purpose so strong as to enable a young man to face up to and overcome all difficulties. Such a purpose can be built only on faith, and that faith can be given only in youth."

"But it must be good faith

HOME GARDEN

By JACK BEASTALL

For Exhibition or Supper

The industrial workers of the English Midlands are very jealous of the leaks they grow, and competition at the local shows is so keen the judges use rules and callipers to decide the winners.

The leak, a very mildly flavored onion, is judged for the length and width of the blanched or white, portion of the plant.

I hesitate to state the dimensions of some of the reported winners, because many ex-Midlanders will recall larger and better specimens they have seen or grown, but it's safe to say that anything less than 12 inches long and two inches thick would be considered very poor.

MAY 1-15

The plants are started indoors from seed, the same as we do here, and the seedlings set out in the open garden between May 1 and 15.

The previously prepared site is made rich with plenty of good compost and a balanced fertilizer (or a home-made mixture) raked into the surface.

Planting is quite simple. Holes are made in the soil and a seedling is dropped into each so that only about one-half inch extends above soil level.

A small amount of water poured into the holes washes sufficient soil around the roots, and the holes eventually are filled during the course of cultivation.

As growth proceeds, soil is drawn towards the stems and banked around them to increase the length of the whitened portion.

This method is worth trying if you are growing for exhibition. In any case, it will give you some good leaks for supper next winter.

Soviet Ties Restored By Cuba

HAVANA (AP) — The Cuban government announced Saturday night the resumption of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union.

The announcement came in a statement from Premier Fidel Castro's ministry of foreign relations. It said diplomatic ties between the two countries, suspended when Cuba was ruled by Fulgencio Batista, were being re-established at the embassy level.

Diplomatic sources here predicted the Castro government will soon exchange ambassadors with Communist China. The Nationalist Chinese government still maintains formal relations with Cuba.

There have been frequent indications that Castro favors adding diplomatic relations to the commercial and cultural ties his government already had established with Peking.

Ottawa Orders Crackdown On Job Insurance Frauds

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has ordered enforcement officers to bear down heavily on Canadians who draw unemployment insurance benefits to which they are not entitled, it is learned.

The most flagrant offenders are those who do not report in full the money they make in casual jobs while drawing unemployment insurance, and those who illegally acquire insurance payment stamps for their books.

The most difficult case, however, is that of the woman who draws insurance benefits after she quits work to marry, and though she says she is available for employment makes such a poor appearance when being interviewed by prospective employers that no one will hire her.

MAY LAY CHARGES

The main enforcement drive now is against those who falsely claim they have not made more than $18 a week while unemployed. When unemployment insurance commission enforcement officers find someone out, they seek repayment of the benefits claimed illegally. On a second offence, a formal charge of fraud is laid.

Enforcement officers deal more sternly, however, with cases of illegal use of the stamps which must be pasted in a claimant's unemployment insurance book by his employer every week during the period he is employed and making contributions to the fund.

Only a few cases of racketeering in unemployment insurance stamps have been uncovered recently.

CBC TV Bid In Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP)—The CBC will appear before the Board of Broadcast Governors here today to state the publicly owned corporation's case for a licence to operate in competition with CFRN-TV, Edmonton's present privately owned station.

The CBC won't be a shoo-in. Its bid for the licence is being challenged by four private groups, each confident enough to have gambled upwards of $50,000 in preparing their applications for the Edmonton licence.

PRICE-FIX BY CEMENT CARTEL CHARGED BY ONTARIO COUNCIL

TORONTO (CP)—City council Monday night decided to investigate allegations of price-fixing by a country-wide cement cartel and to report to federal Justice Minister Fulton.

Alleging a flagrant violation of the Combines Act, Alderman Albert Cranham told council that Canada Cement Company Limited, St. Mary's Cement Company Limited, St. Lawrence Cement Company Limited and Lake Ontario Portland Cement Company Limited all offered normal Portland cement at $3.61 a barrel and high early strength cement at $4.31 a barrel.

Traffic Safety Quiz No. 3

Can you find 10 traffic hazards in this picture?

Look sharp! This quiz checks more than the acuteness of your vision. It also tests your judgment of what's right and wrong on the road. Look again—then rate yourself against the list. But keep in mind that perceiving a traffic hazard is not enough. A good driver is always prepared to take instant action to avoid trouble.

Like all good citizens, Shell is interested in safety. We urge you to be alert, drive carefully, know the rules—and obey them. Remember: about 75% of all accidents are caused by the driver—not the car.

- 1 Boat station wagon is improperly secured (F8, lower right)
- 2 Driver's rear vision blocked by packages (J8, lower right)
- 3 Parked car not completely off highway (C10, center right)
- 4 Car attempting to pass on the right (D7, center)
- 5 Car with trailer is cutting in on car at left (B8, upper-center right)
- 6 Car crossing divider (A6, top center)
- 7 Child losing ball from car (E4, left center)
- 8 Driver reaching in back of car, his eyes off road (G1, lower left)
- 9 Car following car ahead too closely (D2, left center)
- 10 Car with one door not completely closed (I-5, bottom center)

(These are major hazards; there are others. If you found more than ten, congratulations!)

That's why Shell says: Your Car Has Built-in Safety—YOU!

PORTLAND PUCK FANS RIDE WITH BUCKAROOS

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—A nickname has been chosen for the new Portland team that is scheduled to enter the Western Hockey League next season. The team's name will be "The Buckaroos," suggested by some of the more than 2,000 fans who mailed in ideas, said club president Al Forman of Portland. The name was used by a hockey team here years ago.

Forman said the suggestions from fans ranged from A (Aces) to Z (Zippers).

DODGERS ON MOVE

Sherry Back In Business

LARRY SHERRY
... third straight

By UP International
World Series hero Larry Sherry is back in the bullpen, and the way he's going he'll soon have the Los Angeles Dodgers back in business.

Manager Walt Alston discarded his early-season trial of the 24-year-old fireballer as a starter after Sherry lost three of four decisions in the unaccustomed role and the move is paying immediate dividends. In fact, Sherry has won all three of the Dodgers' most recent triumphs and has allowed only one run and five hits in his last 10 1/2 innings.

Sherry appeared on the scene Monday night after Bob Skinner's ninth-inning homer enabled Pittsburgh Pirates to tie the score at 4-4 and picked up his third win in five days when Charlie Neal connected for a three-run homer off Elroy Face in the last of the frame to produce a 7-4 victory.

SLUMP CONTINUES

The blow produced a third straight loss this season for Face, who didn't lose his first game last year until September and finished the campaign with an 18-1 record. It also was the fourth loss in a row for the Pirates and their sixth in seven games since their nine-game winning streak.

Camilo Pascual struck out 11 batters and pitched a three-hitter as Washington Senators beat the Kansas City Athletics, 8-1, in the only other major league action Monday. Pascual, who hadn't won since setting a club strikeout mark of 15 batters on opening day, leads the American League with 42 strikeouts.

Neal, a key player in the Dodgers' World Series victory over Chicago White Sox, started Monday night's game hitting only 219 and with only three runs batted in to show for the season. He had gone hitless in four previous trips to the plate before he lifted a homer just over the left field screen after a single by Maury Wills, a sacrifice by Sherry and an intentional walk set the stage for him.

Don Drysdale faced only 22 batters and struck out 13 in the first seven innings to carry a 4-0 lead into the eighth, but Bill Mazeroski cut the Pirates' deficit in half with a two-run homer and Skinner tied it in the ninth with his two-run shot.

The Pirates, who made seven errors against San Francisco Giants on Sunday, made four more Monday and thus have committed 11 miscues in their last two games.

Jim Lemon hit his sixth homer and Bob Allison hit his second to lead the Senators' 13-hit attack on four Kansas City pitchers. Earl Battey singled home two runs and Reno Bertoia singled home another as the Senators routed Ray Herbert in the first inning. Pascual, who walked three, was tagged for an unearned run in the third inning when Dick Williams scored on a throwing error by Billy Con solo.

PLENTY OF BALANCE IN VANCOUVER LINEUP

Can Bob Do Better?

Could this be the season Vancouver finally comes into its own in the Inter City Lacrosse League?

Packing one of the best-balanced lineups in the league during the past two years, Vancouver never managed to find its predicted power under the coaching of Jack McKinnon.

This season Bobby Marsh has taken over the reins and the club is threatening to take command in the four-club circuit.

Currently tied for first place with the hard-hitting Nanaimo squad, Marsh's lads will be bidding to go out in front by themselves in a home-and-home series with Victoria this week.

Vancouver hosts the Vics at Kerrisdale Arena tonight and completes the two-game set against the improving Victorians at Memorial Arena Wednesday night.

Indicating the balanced scoring attack of the Marshmen is the fact that only one point separates their four leading snipers.

Ingemar Isn't Hiding That Right This Time

GROSSINGER, N.Y. (AP)—There's a "new" Ingemar Johansson of Sweden training for defence of his world heavyweight boxing championship.

No longer is Johansson the easy-going, take-it-slow fighter that he was the last time he showed up here a year ago. He showed so little then that some folks feared for his life against champion Floyd Patterson.

Johansson cut down Patterson and won the title with a devastating right hand. Ingemar began a sparring

MIDWEST LEAGUE

Perrin's Still Beating Drums

WINNIPEG (CP)—Jack Perrin, general manager of Winnipeg Warriors of the Western Hockey League, said Monday there are terrific possibilities in a new league including Winnipeg and mid-western American cities.

Perrin had just returned from a weekend meeting in St. Paul, Minn., where he talked with representatives of teams in the existing International League.

Although officials of the St. Paul club of the IHL dismissed talk of a new league as speculation, Perrin said in an interview: "The possibilities, in my mind, are terrific. This is what I'd like to see, and I believe the rest of the Western League feels the same way."

IDEAL SETUP
"The shorter distances, bigger cities and buildings would make the southern loop an ideal setup for Winnipeg, considering the travel in the WHL. Besides, we would get away from those doubleheaders which were necessary in the Western League," Perrin expressed the view.

'Fat One' Haunts Hurlers

By The Associated Press
The spook that haunts all hurlers and is known as "One Fat Pitch" visited two Pacific Coast League baseball diamonds Tuesday night bearing defeats for San Diego and Seattle.

There were many more fat pitches elsewhere as Sacramento's league-leading Solons whipped Portland 7-4 and Vancouver walloped the Salt Lake City Bees 10-1.

But Tacoma's 1-0 victory over Seattle, and Spokane's ninth-inning rally for five runs and a 7-6 decision over San Diego, were cited by the O.P.P.

Ray Rippelmeyer was the victim at Tacoma. He walked Danny O'Connell in the sixth inning and then came in with a ball that Bob Perry drove 380 feet for a triple.

DAVIS DOES IT
In Spokane the victim was reliever Tom Qualters. Three runs had scored in the ninth but Spokane still was one in arrears when Willie Davis came to bat. He slammed a Qualters offering against the left centerfield wall for a double that chased home two runners for the decision.

Chuck Oetzel looking for his first hit of the season, found it and two more in leading Vancouver to its second straight victory. He collected a triple and two singles, as George Zuvvink quieted the Salt Lake bats.

Jim's Still Hoping For Move to LA

California Shift Unlikely; City's Puck Picture Good

The battle to land a Western Hockey League team in Los Angeles appears to be over—until next year.

If any puck officials were still wondering if the California city would jump at the chance to grab a WHL franchise, they had an answer when league president Al Leader announced Monday that the possibility of a California shift would not be considered at this week's annual meeting at Calgary.

Although it is believed that the National Hockey League has no immediate plans for expansion, Leader was informed that the swank, 16,000-seat Los Angeles arena would not be available for WHL dates until at least after the annual NHL sessions in June.

In other words, the arena management has indicated that the land of the Dodgers and Rams wants big-league hockey, but might eventually consider the WHL variety if the NHL brand isn't available.

But WHL directors don't want to wait. They intend to finalize all plans for next season at the Calgary session Thursday and Friday. "I do not think," says Leader, "that any consideration will be given to a Los Angeles entry at this time."

Even if the LA rink had been made available, it is probable that there would have been strong opposition to the California shift since some directors believe that gates in Los Angeles would not be large enough to compensate for increased travelling costs and scheduling problems.

Developments have undoubtedly improved Victoria's chances of keeping a club in the WHL. Although Cougar owner Jim Piggott still wants to move his hockey operations south, he appears ready to continue in Victoria "if conditions are right."

"I am not at all convinced despite all I hear that Los Angeles wouldn't support a Western Hockey League Club," the Saskatoon construction man said Monday night. "and I will put a club in Los Angeles if I can."

Revenue from September exhibition games helped the Cougars come close to breaking even for last season and Piggott stressed the importance of the pre-season games. Leader had earlier been informed that Memorial Arena would not be available until about Oct. 15.

Piggott has said that a satisfactory rental agreement is necessary to keep a team here. "If hockey is good for the community and you have a community-owned arena," he said, "I think some consideration should be given. The arena made money on hockey last year but I lost money."

Arena manager Joe Dukowski has been in touch with the Cougar owner in the past couple of weeks and the pair will meet again in Calgary to discuss rent in the event the California shift is officially vetoed.

If Piggott decides to keep his hockey interests here, he will be facing the difficult task of finding a replacement for manager-coach Hal Laycoe, who will be with the new Portland entry next season.

Expressing regret that Laycoe would not be handling his club next season, Piggott said he had a couple of other men in mind. "I'm sure I can find the right man," he said.

Pages Warm Up With Exhibitions

Victoria Pages have 12 home games scheduled during the Northwest Baseball League season.

Pages, who make their home debut against Bellingham Bells at Royal Athletic Park May 21, are slated to play split doubleheaders against American clubs on their Saturday appearances before Victoria fans.

Opposing Victoria in the circuit, which was formed this year, are Bellingham, Sedro Woolley Chiefs, Seattle Mariners, Cheney Studs, Tacoma Woodworth Construction, Centralia, Aberdeen and Fort Lewis.

Let's Discuss Bubble Gum And Trades...
NEW YORK (AP)—Relief pitcher Don Elston and infielder Don Zimmer of Chicago Cubs will be traded to Milwaukee Braves for two promising young pitchers, the New York Daily News says.

The newspaper says the Braves pitchers involved probably will be Ken Mackenzie and Don Nottebart.

In Milwaukee, general manager John McHale of the Braves, said there is nothing to the story.

"Rumors are flying around like crazy," he said. "Believe it or not, someone called me a little while ago and asked if I had traded Eddie Mathews and Johnny Logan to the Cubs for Ernie Banks. I said we would if they threw in the Wrigley gum company."

The William Wrigley Jr. Chewing Gum Company of Chicago owns the Cubs.

Snead, who finished Monday with a 13-under-par 208 for the 54-hole competition, was followed by Jimmy Demaret and Cary Middlecoff, each with 209 for $7,000 each.

Jackie Burke Jr. won fourth place prize money of $5,000 in the four-man tournament with a 211.

Middlecoff fired a course record-equaling 68 Monday and Demaret a 69 in the final play.

College Boxing On Ropes

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Inter-collegiate boxing in the United States suffered what may turn out to be a knock-out blow when it was dropped Monday by the University of Wisconsin, long a leader and often a champion in the sport.

The Badgers were voted out of competition by the Wisconsin faculty less than a month after the death of Wisconsin boxer Charles Mohr, who suffered a brain injury in a bout.

Wisconsin was the last major school outside the Pacific coast area still in the sport. Agitation for abolition of inter-collegiate boxing increased after Mohr's death and probably will gain more strength from the Wisconsin decision.

Dr. David B. Fellman, professor of political science and a backer of Monday's move, said there were several reasons for abandoning boxing, but the "health reason is reason enough."

Coincidence, or does the Royal Canadian Golf Association's new handicap system really work?

Judging results of some of the early events played this season, it would seem that the new system has a notable effect on handicap scores.

In the past few seasons, it was not uncommon for a golfer—especially one in the high handicap brackets—to win a tournament with a net of 62, 63 or thereabouts.

Also, the little fella with the big handicap appeared to have an edge in handicap tournaments in past years.

Those low-60 scores, however, have been conspicuous by their absence this season. By the same token, the low handicap hotshots have been sharing handicap prizes almost equally with their divot-digging brothers who get most of the strokes.

Exhibit "A" might be taken from the qualifying round of the Times Vancouver Island Open. The best net score from a record field of over 160 was a 70 carded by George Bigelow, MD.

The Oak Bay golfer, a three-handicapper, also scored the day's best gross—73. Since he was already assured of the gross prize, net medal-honors were turned over to Gorge Vale's Reg Hoadley, 79-81.

Exhibit "B" is supplied by W. De Silva, who captured the Gorge Vale handicap championship Sunday with a 36-hole net score of 141, or one stroke under the course rating for the distance. The winner was 83-14—69 Sunday and 86-14—72 the previous week.

Norm Boden, who gets three strokes in the club event, was the first-round leader with a 70. His 73 was also the best gross in the opening round.

Is the trend one of coincidence, or is the new handicap system the great equalizer?

My vote goes to the handicap system.

Sunday's affair at Gorge Vale was a handicap meeting, but diminutive Bob Woods stole the show with a round believed to be the best gross ever recorded in official medal play at that course.

Playing off the back tees, Bob scored a four-under 68. The four-handicapper never had a bogey as he went out in 33 and came in with a 35. The unofficial course record is a 65 scored a few years ago by Bob Fleming.

De Silva, as mentioned, is the new handicap champion. Runner-up honors are being shared by Boden, 148-142, and D. Lowe, 176-34—142. Woods, who had an 83 the previous week, slipped in with a 151 to edge John Merriman by one stroke for the low gross prize.

Winners of net prizes for each of the two rounds were Harold Kirkham, 83-12—71; Maurice Grute, 90-48—72; Ed Brady, 84-12—72; W. Scott, 83-12—71; T. Bradshaw, 77-6—71, and Vince Wheatley, 77-6—71.

Notice, if you will, the absence of scores in the 60s.

SHORT CHIPS: Deadline for entries in the Centennial Foursomes tournament, to be played Sunday at Uplands, is fast approaching. Leo Derman announces that the draw will be made Wednesday evening.

Herb Morrison and Bill Clayton came up with their third successful defence of the Cedar Hill buttons Sunday by defeating John Moore and Tom Harper. Bill McConnell and Steve Bullock meet next Sunday in the final for the Cedar Hill club championship.

A seven iron was Harry Robinson's lucky weapon on the 7th hole at Colwood Sunday, but it didn't help him win his flight match.

Playing in the club handicap tournament, Robinson scored a hole-in-one on the 7th but dropped his match, 3 and 2, to Derek Rhys-Jones.

Medallist Don Ross dropped out of the championship race, losing 1 up to Denny Hendra in their semifinal playoff.

The other semifinal match was postponed because of a hand injury to Mick Morgan, who will play Pete Seward later this week.

Defending champion James Barry stepped to the sidelines but co-favorites Dr. George Bigelow and Bill McCall advanced with ease in the run for the club crown at Oak Bay.

Barry was beaten on the 19th by Alan Taylor.

In another extra-hole match, George Sparling defeated Harold Husband.

Others advancing to the second round were Dr. Malcolm McKay, Al Manson, Lou Williams and Bill Newcombe.

The first round of Oak Bay's "B" championship was particularly rough on medallist Jim Brown and defending champion Ernie Watt.

Doug Fosbrooke beat Brown, 1 up, while Harry Mearns sidelined Watt, 5 and 3.

Also advancing in the "B" chase were R. O. Gunning, Jack Fidler, N. Howard, L. E. Pope, Bill Munro and Eric Clark.

New Managers Set For Senior Openers

Highlighting a youth movement that includes the managers' ranks, Victoria's four-team Senior Amateur Baseball League swings into another season Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

A flock of graduates from the city's bustling minor baseball system will be stepping in with the seniors for the first time and four new managers will be on display during the two-game, opening day program.

Taking their freshman fling at pushing the strategy buttons will be catcher Jim Moody, voted the league's most valuable player last year; pitcher Keith Todd, first baseman John Catterall and outfielder Larry McKinty.

Moody will call the shots for Eagles, Todd will pilot Naval Vets, Catterall is handling the helm for Wakeman, Trimble and Olson Motors, taking over the franchise held last season by Page the Cleaner, will be managed by McKinty.

All clubs will start with several 17 and 18-year-old players who have moved up from last season's Colt and Babe Ruth loops and league officials are predicting fast-moving and interesting games during the campaign.

Opening Saturday's twin bill at 1:30 will be Eagles and Naval Vets. The nightcap portion of the program will send Olsons against the W-T squad at 6:30.

INTER-CITY GAMES
Following Saturday's openers, league games at Athletic Park will be played on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, starting at 6:30 each night.

A series of inter-city exhibition tussles are planned for the Saturday and holiday dates when the local diamond is not being used by Victoria's entry in the semi-pro Northwest Baseball League.

Expected to be an added incentive for senior league players is the chance to move up to Victoria Pages in the northwest circuit during the season.

Wouters Captures Senior Bike Race
Hank Wouters took top honors at the Victoria Bicycle Club opened its summer season Sunday at John Dean Park.

Wouters won the 14-mile senior event in seven minutes, 16 seconds. Gary McKay finished in second place.

Ken Hay topped the junior men's division and Marilyn Burley set the pace in the girls' competition.

City Chess Club To Host Alberni
Victoria City Chess Club, which defeated Nanaimo 6-4 in a Vancouver Island Chess League match last week, will host Alberni in a match here Saturday.

The match will be played at the club rooms, 1417 Government Street, starting at 3 p.m.

This week's club schedule: Tonight—Hobson vs. Horn, Restall vs. Briggs, Woodcock vs. Horn, Friday—Dr. Macdonald vs. Basanta.

RUNNING FOR HOUSTON
HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Houston Oilers of the American Football League have announced the signing of Jim Wood, former end who tried out with B.C. Lions last year, and Jerry Heilun, a pro tackle eight years.

South Africa Remains In Command
DERBY, England (Reuters)—The South African cricketers maintained their grip on the match against Derbyshire Monday, gaining a first-innings lead of 235 runs and capturing two of the county's wickets for 56 by the close.

The tourists declared at tea with their score 343 for eight after rain had held up play for 45 minutes.

Tony Pithey and Sid O'Linn, resuming their fourth-wicket stand, took every possible run today in a business-like partnership that put on 82 before Pithey was run out for 96.

O'Linn went on to compile 73. Scores of Monday's games: At Swansea: Gloucestershire 88 and 152; Glamorgan 384 for seven declared. (Glamorgan beat Gloucestershire by an innings and 144 runs).

At Darford: Kent 238; Lancashire 71 and 117. (Kent beat Lancashire by an innings and 39 runs).

At Bristol: Warwickshire 360 and 47 for two; Gloucestershire 343. At Here: Sussex 280 and 49 for no wicket; Yorkshire 281 for no wicket declared. (A. Lightfoot 104, R. Subba Row 167 not out).

At Cambridge: Essex 239 and 32 for two; Cambridge University 208. (R. Pridmore 160).

At Derby: Derbyshire 199 and 84 for two; South Africa 343 for eight declared.

At Nottingham: Somerset 239 for nine declared and 91 for two; Nottinghamshire 219.

At London: Hampshire 88 and 130; Middlesex 182.

Alouettes' Scout Shifts to Buffalo
BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI)—Harvey Johnson, the top placement kicker in the old All-America Conference, has signed a contract as assistant coach and chief talent scout with the Buffalo Bills of the American Football League.

Johnson joined Buffalo two days after resigning a similar post with Montreal Alouettes.

Johnson, who played fullback in pro football, was noted for his extra-point accuracy.

IN DOUBLE FATALITY CRASH

Neglect Charge Against Driver

UCLUELET—John Walton of Ucluelet will appear for a preliminary hearing here May 16, charged with criminal negligence arising from a highway crash last Feb. 27 in which two men were killed and one woman seriously injured.

Killed were Paul Norton, 28, formerly of Victoria, and Jimmy McKay, 30, a Ucluelet Indian fisherman.

Still in serious condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria is Mrs. Paul Norton.

Walton's bail was set at $5,000.

The accident, involving two cars, took place six miles from Ucluelet on the highway to Tofino.

NANAIMO—RCMP Monday guarded a Nanaimo supermarket's safe after safecrackers loaded nitroglycerine around the door but were unable to set it off.

An explosives specialist was called from Vancouver to neutralize the charge.

Police said the attempted safecracking failed because the detonating cap went off but failed to detonate the explosive.

PORT ALBERNI—The provincial cabinet is sitting here today.

Apart from business—which includes hearing a number of briefs concerning roads, parks and senior citizens' housing—the cabinet will tour the area and lunch at Klitsa Lodge.

Port Alberni council will be host to cabinet members at a dinner tonight.

ALBERNI—Approval of a $348,000 budget by city council will mean a one-mill increase in the tax rate, to a total of 40 mills.

Mayor Mable Anderson said wage increases covered by a union agreement do not meet wholly with her approval, although the increases were justified.

NANAIMO—Daniel Brown has been elected chief of the Nanaimo Indian band in an election which saw a husband and wife—Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Wilson—and two other nominees contesting for the two-year position.

DUNCAN—Funeral services were held Monday for Harry Isaac Penner, 52, a veteran of the Second World War, who died at Franklin River Friday.

He took part in the Dieppe Raid with the Canadian Scottish and served in the Italian campaign with the RCME.

He was born at Kane, Man., and resided at Copper Canyon before coming here in 1953. He was a member of the Canadian Legion at New Westminster and a former member of the Royal Order of Moose.

He is survived by the widow, Pearl; two sons, Wayne, Russell, and one daughter, Shirley, all at home.

GANGES—The original slate of officers was returned at the annual dinner meeting of the Salt Spring Island Lions Club.

The club was formed last September and only change was the addition of a third vice-president, Tom Dobson. Two-year directors, C. F. Mout and J. H. P. Frederick who left the island, were replaced by Jim Hawksworth and Fred Luddington.

Full slate includes: President, W. H. Bradley; vice-presidents, Bob Holloman, Bill Trelford and Tom Dobson; secretary, Les Baird; treasurer, W. T. D. Jones; lion tamer, Dennis Deacon; tall twister, Dr. Ted Jansoh; finances, Jack McNulty; membership, Walter Malley; constitution and bylaws, Daryl Logan; directors, Jim Hawksworth, Fred Luddington, Harold Hoffman and Rod Pringle.

Residents Ask Recognition For 'Road That Isn't There'

NORTH COWICHAN—In chairman of public works, and theory Roome Road does not exist but the road has been used as a public road for years.

John Watts, Fred Ackerman and John S. Mills, residents of Roome Road, have requested North Cowichan council to establish the road as a gazetted municipal road.

Council heard it would be necessary to obtain 25 feet on each side of the centre line. Reeve D. C. Morton told municipal clerk A. Van de Casteyen to write the residents that the council requires 50 feet before it can take over Roome Road.

NORTH COWICHAN—Municipal consulting engineer E. D. Piggett, Coun. A. Staples,

Harris Elected

Officers of Central Saanich Chamber of Commerce for the coming year are Charles Harris, elected to his second term as president; William Chatterton, vice-president; M. O. Goodman, secretary; Ron Framp-ton, treasurer.

NEAR-FATAL LOOK-SEE TAKEN BY POWDERMAN

CAMPBELL RIVER—Charles King is in Campbell River Hospital with injuries to the face and body received when a charge of dynamite exploded near him while working at the Langford Cedar Logging Company at Bute Inlet.

The Duncan man went to investigate why one of two charges he had placed in a stump had failed to explode. The charge went off, peppering him with gravel.

LORD'S DAY ACT VIOLATED BY DRAG RACES, SAY RCMP

Quarter-Milers Ignore Complaint

DUNCAN—Gerald Smith, race on the B.C. Cement Co. Victoria, of the Quarter Milers Ltd, private road near Shawnigan Lake, said the club will ignore a complaint to the attorney-general's department that the club is violating the Lord's Day Observance Act.

Eight summonses were handed out for driving infractions by spectators, placed by police at more than 2,500.

RCMP, who laid the complaint, warned club members five was to keep 'the rods' off the roads and added 'we are The warning followed the going something that should club's third weekend drag have been done years ago.'

He said no admission was charged to the races but that there was a collection.

This money will go towards building a drag strip sometime in the future, he said.

Vaniers Like Western Style Hospitality

EDMONTON (CP)—Governor-General Vanier and his wife have been caught up in western hospitality.

"We've been discovering Canada," the Governor-General said Monday. "... Everywhere we have found the welcome friendly. I don't know if it's a tradition from pioneering days, but there is about this part of the country a friendliness and a 'forthcomingness' which moves us very much indeed."

He and Mrs. Vanier agreed there is something about the West "that we haven't got in the East."

They wound up a four-day visit to Edmonton by attending a civic luncheon and a charity ball at the swank Derrick Golf and Winter Club. The vice-regal party then headed for Calgary as the next stop on a Western Canada tour.

HOSPITAL BALL

The ball was arranged by the women's auxiliary to the University of Alberta Hospital and was in aid of the hospital's volunteer services. More than 700 couples attended.

The vice-regal couple was presented with a foot-high Eskimo soapstone carving of an Eskimo catching a seal.

The presentation was made officially by an RCMP constable in the ballroom but it actually was made earlier informally by two Eskimo patients in the Charles Camell Hospital.

Mrs. Vanier showed interest in an arrangement of Eskimo paintings—by 13 and 14-year-old children. Also on display at the hospital were examples of Eskimo handicraft.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

By EARL WILSON

LONDON—I felt like putting on my bowler to talk to the exactor, now the big business tycoon, Douglas Fairbanks, who was America's best-known face at Princess Margaret's royal wedding.

"Sir Douglas," as he is entitled to be called, put aside several business deals that involve everything from popcorn to bowling alleys to be a wedding guest.

Sweeping into his home in Kensington from New York, Washington and Holland, he barely had time to "get hold of Jock's office"—that would be Ambassador Jock Whitney—to find out what he was expected to wear.

NO MEDALS

Not that he had much doubt. Medals wouldn't be worn, though he had a flock of them, and ribbons too. No medals, because this didn't call for uniforms.

"I've got a pre-war morning coat that goes back to 1938," he said. "And I squeeze myself into it without popping a button."

The business and social successes of the Yankee from Hollywood have evidently made some Londoners a little jealous. They tease him sometimes.

One paper just printed an item saying that he probably never said it, nevertheless he was being quoted as saying: "As I was saying to the Queen, I hate a name dropper."

WITH AUTHORITY

If he talks about the Queen—though he seldom does—he can do it with authority. I asked him whether in view of his business triumphs, he misses not being before the cameras.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS... a beaker yet.

ZIVA RODANN... new date

ERNIE KOVACS... movie

"I haven't really had any passion for that for about 25 years," he said.

"The TV series thing is such a sweat. You work like stink and don't know for so long whether you've made any money."

"I've decided I couldn't do that without losing my wife, my health and my hair."

So he went into trade in a big way. He got into a company that sold chocolate-covered popcorn via machine, then unknown in England. It was also early with bowling alleys.

NOBODY NOTICED

"All those business activities of mine have been going on for years. Nobody noticed them until now."

Fairbanks mentioned that he has a debutante daughter just getting into the royal social swim here.

And with a jolly-ho lilt to his voice, he added, "While you're here we must get together and have a beaker."

A beaker yet.

NEGRO DENIED DAMAGES

CALGARY (CP)—A Supreme Court decision handed down Monday dismisses the claim that a colored person was unlawfully denied accommodation last year by a Calgary motel.

Mr. Justice Hugh C. Farthing said plaintiff Theodore Stanley King "was not a traveller and therefore had no right to accommodation" when turned away by the Barclay Motel last May 13.

Mr. King, a member of the Alberta Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has asked $500 damages for the "humiliation, indignity and insult."

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other interesting prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia, and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Address your questions to "Ask Andy," Victoria Daily Times.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to William Feller, age 11, of Millersville, Penna., for his question:

What is a sea urchin?

Long ago, when people believed in fairyland, an urchin was supposed to be a mischievous elf who often turned himself into a hedgehog. Later, the word urchin was used to describe any small boy bent on mischief. A sea urchin lives in the sea, but he is neither an elf nor a boy. However, he does look somewhat like a small hedgehog.

The prickly little fellow is related to the starfish, which is not really a fish, and the serpent star, which is not really a serpent. He is also kin to the sea cucumber, which is not a plant, and the sea lily, which is not a flower. This misunderstood group of oddities belong in the animal phylum Echinodermata, the spiny-skinned ones.

The sea urchin lives on the floors of shallow seas and sometimes in tidal pools. On the beach, you are more likely to find a skeleton of a living sea urchin and the two look vastly different. The skeleton is a boney white little globe of calcium.

The inside of the strange little globe is hollow. The outside is adorned with a lacy pattern of buttons and holes. There are five double rows of holes arranged like the sections of an orange. There are also many little bumps and buttons of various sizes. At the top and bottom of the round skeleton there are two larger holes. One is the mouth hole and you may still see its five little teeth.

The living sea urchin dwells inside this skeleton and the outside of the round globe is covered with muscles, skin and prickles. The prickles are set in the little buttons and they can be moved this way—and that by muscles in the skin.

Sometimes the sea urchin uses his prickles to dig himself a shallow hole in the sea floor, but their main purpose is to keep him from being eaten. They are not his principal means of travel but they help.

Great Variation in Spines

There are several varieties of sea urchin, but none of them are more than a few inches wide, including prickles. The short-spined urchin looks like an overgrown burr and his spikes are sometimes tipped with white. The needle-spined urchin has long needle-fine and needle-sharp spines which may be poisonous. The slate-pencil urchin has thick, clumsy spines which look rather like old-time slate pencils.

No matter what his spines are like, the sea urchin travels on tube feet. He has a great number of these slender tubes, each ending in a little sucker. They are put out and withdrawn through those holes in the skeleton. When he wishes to travel, the sea urchin's tube feet extend beyond his prickles. They work by hydraulic action or water power. When filled with water, they are firm and the little suckers stick to the ground. When empty, they relax and the little suckers let go. The sea urchin travels by filling and emptying the tube feet on first one side, then another.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

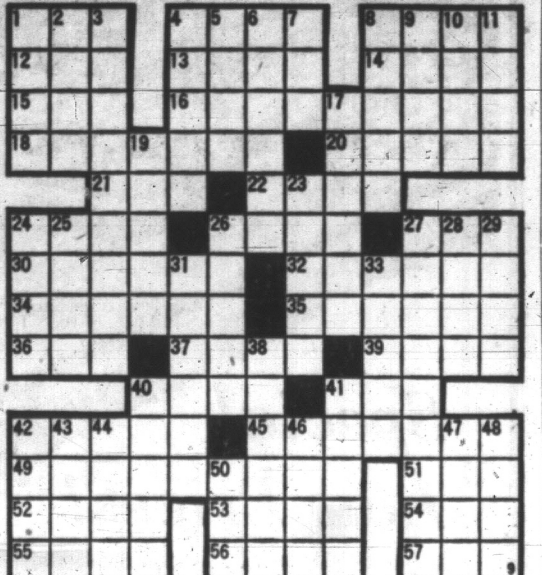

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

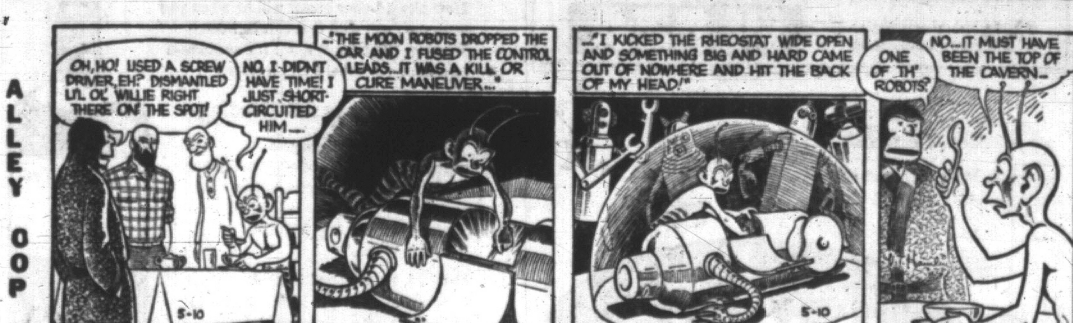

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores.

Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Pension Too Late To Save Veteran

(Times News Services)
VANCOUVER—The pension cheques arrived too late for John Bertram Currie Hess, 60. He was found two weeks ago in Burrard Inlet, his pockets filled with rocks.

Police said Monday the man's body was identified by the landlady of a rooming house who had evicted him shortly before his death.

The woman had said she "carried" him as a roomer for some time. He had told her he was trying to get a pension and he had some property in Toronto he wanted to sell.

She had said she would keep Hess' mail for him and shortly afterwards the veterans cheques had arrived. When Hess did not pick them up she notified police.

Police had not been able to identify the body and were prepared to bury it in an unmarked grave.

WILL AID OTHERS

VANCOUVER—The teamsters union said today that if it is officially expelled from the Canadian Labor Congress, it will continue to help CLC-affiliated unions in B.C. provided they don't raid the teamsters.

Ed Lawson, president of Teamsters joint council No. 36, which covers British Columbia, said the teamsters won't help CLC unions win strikes if they are going to assist in any CLC drive to take members away from the teamsters.

INJUNCTION GRANTED

VANCOUVER—The British Columbia Supreme Court Monday granted an injunction restraining the Shipping Federation of B.C., Johnson Walto Steamships Ltd. and Vancouver Wharves Ltd. from employing non-union labor in loading the freighter Dona Ourania.

The injunction was requested by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CLC).

The freighter was scheduled to load 3,000 tons of nickel concentrate for Japan from the bulk loading dock of Vancouver Wharves Ltd. in North Vancouver.

FLEA FOR REFUGEES

TRAIL—World refugee relief is the supreme humanitarian issue of today and a magnificent field in which service organizations could expend their efforts, Rev. Norman Larmonth of Vancouver said Monday.

Dr. Larmonth, speaking to delegates from Washington, Idaho and B.C. attending the Rotary District 506 convention, said there are at present 40,000,000 refugees in the world.

VICTIM IDENTIFIED

POWELL RIVER—Edgar McDonald was identified Monday as the third victim in a weekend fishing tragedy near the city 100 miles north of Vancouver.

Skin divers have recovered all bodies. Police earlier identified the other two as Harold Chapman and Ole Burg.

The three were drowned when their boat overturned on Gordon Pasha Lake, 12 miles south of here.

'CANADIANS WON'T LEARN TO COOK'

Canada is having to import cooks by the hundred from European countries because Canadians will not learn cooking—and despise it—says William Grauwiler, executive chef to the Canadian Pacific Hotel system, who is now visiting Victoria.

"Cooking is a wonderful, exciting pastime, but most Canadians think it is a lowly occupation," said burly broad-shouldered Mr. Grauwiler, a native of Switzerland.

"Even if a young Canadian wants to become a hotel manager he should first learn to be a good cook—or chef—otherwise he does not know if the hotel is being properly managed."

"And, if he fails as a manager, he can always go back to being a chef. No man is more needed anywhere in the world than a good chef."

Mr. Grauwiler, a native of Basel, Switzerland, arrived at Montreal at 2 one morning in 1948 and the same afternoon at 3 joined the staff of the Mount Royal Hotel.

YOUNG PEOPLE
Soon after he joined Canadian Pacific Hotels and, having risen from kitchen-boy to chef of all the Canadian Pacific Hotels, he declares:

"We would like to get young people interested in the hotel business. But they don't want to be bothered with the ground work. They want to start off as managers."

PARKING METERS LOOTED
VANCOUVER—Police say fast-working thieves have been making $150 a day for the last three weeks by emptying parking meters just before the arrival of the regular collection man.

They said the men have copies of the keys required to open the 2,200 meters in the city.

City employees opened 50 meters in the downtown area Monday, expecting the usual average collection of $3.50 per meter. Most were empty and the best collection was 70 cents.

'TAILS' WERE DRAGGED ON GROUND

Rain Swamps Palace Garden Party

LONDON (UPI)—It would not dare rain at a Buckingham Palace garden party. But it did.

Some 2,000 guests who gathered in the great royal outdoors Monday for a post-wedding splash got soaked to their high-class skins.

Ladies who had showed up looking fresh and sprightly in summery dresses and broad-rimmed chapeaux suddenly turned pale and wilted as an initial light shower thickened into a veritable cloudburst.

Gentlemen, monocled and otherwise, sagged under the weight of the moisture-laden tails of their morning coats.

"Oh really, Charles," one woman finally snapped to her escort. "Let's go home."

Most of the guests, however, decided to stick it out, presumably in the belief it was all some ghastly mistake.

American actors Henry Fonda and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., chatted amiably with Princess Alexandra as the water trickled off their famous noses. She held an umbrella over her head.

Those who could huddled around trees. Eventually, when it became apparent there would be no early end to the downpour, there was a mass rush of about 2,000 guests for the cover of the garden lounge, which normally can accommodate only 500 persons.

"Goodness" wailed one bedraggled lady. "It's like the Black Hole of Calcutta."

Some called it just retribution for the unusually good weather Britain enjoyed Friday, when Princess Margaret and Antony Armstrong-Jones were married.

EKBERG IN CHAMPAGNE

'Splashy' Opening For Film Festival

CANNES, France (UPI)—Italian producers said today they will launch their controversial movie, "Sweet Life," at the Cannes film festival with a "Roman orgy" featuring Anita Ekberg in a bathtub of champagne.

The Italians wouldn't say what sort of costume the curvaceous Swede would wear in her chilly bubble bath. They said they were saving that as a "surprise."

Miss Ekberg is expected here today.

The Italians vow that their party will top French-American producer Jules Dassin's Greek Party, the most lavish entertainment seen at the festival so far.

The great novelty of Dassin's party was an invitation to 800-odd guests to smash the glasses from which they gulped the potent Greek liqueur ouzo.

Thousands of glasses were broken, and some guests wound up at the doctor's having splinters of glass removed from their feet.

HEY FELLOWS, HERE I AM!

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police, firemen and ambulance attendants worked frantically Monday to unload three singloads of lumber from an overturned truck in the hopes that the driver was alive beneath.

Then a man came along.

It was the driver, Bhatan Singh, 58, who had walked back to his office to get help in moving the lumber off the road.

Rotary Auction

DUNCAN—Duncan Rotary Club will auction second-hand household articles beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday in the basement of the Eagles' Hall, near Government Street and Canada Avenue in Duncan.

Will Lund, Victoria auctioneer, will conduct the sale, and all proceeds will go to charity.

Rotary Anns will hold a two-day rummage sale Friday and Saturday at the same location.

Householders wishing to donate used articles can telephone 431. The club has arranged a pickup truck service for today.

Cuba Frees Newsmen

HAVANA (AP)—Richard Valeriani and Tony Ortega, correspondent and photographer for The Associated Press, were freed Monday by Cuban military authorities after being held incommunicado for 40 hours. Valeriani is a U.S. citizen, Ortega a Cuban.

What kind of British people should be encouraged to come to British Columbia?

We put this question to Premier Bennett at his last press conference, and he replied nurses, teachers, secretaries, stenographers and—those who have supreme confidence in themselves.

The premier seemed to attach particular virtue to the word confidence. Yet when asked if newspapermen should be encouraged to come out here, he replied with a grin: "I think we could export a few first."

City sightseeing driver Rebel Mowat is one of the many Victorians who think Foul Bay Road should not be changed to University Drive.

"I get more inquiries about the name Foul Bay Road than anywhere else," says Rebel, "and the replies are always interesting. Either it was the rocks which threatened to foul incoming craft, or it was the fowl of the air."

But who in heck is going to ask any questions about a stuffy name like University Drive?

Maestro Billy Tickle, retiring next Saturday evening after 35 years at the Empress Hotel, is getting greetings and goodwill messages from all across Canada and up and down the Pacific coast.

"You must be the oldest dance band leader in the world," writes a fan from Eugene, Oregon.

"Don't know if I am the oldest," says 67-year-old Billy, "but I don't think anyone else has led a hotel band as long as I have."

Does Mr. Tickle think his dance music is out of date? Not a bit of it.

"Melody and good, clean rhythm are never out of date," he says.

Another Victoria musician, Don Partridge, is going strong as organist at Seattle's newest restaurant—The Golden Lion.

Though well appreciated, he writes: "I am still a Canadian at heart. But you can only beat your head against a red-brick wall for so long. Then it begins to hurt."

The repair job will employ an average of 20 men for about two months, Capt. G. A. Veres, managing director, said today.

"It comes at a most fortunate time," he said. "Our spring refit season for fishermen and pleasure yachtsmen is over, and we would have had to lay off men if we hadn't."

HE TREKKED 'INDIAN COUNTRY'

Francis Algernon (Frank) Devereaux, widely known B.C. land surveyor, who led as colorful a life as his Elizabethan forebears, died at his "Westbourne" Bay Street residence Monday. He was 93.

A man who played a major part in the development of the Greater Victoria area, Mr. Devereaux was the son of Capt. John Francis Devereaux, a pioneer resident, explorer and famous sea captain.

EXPLORED

Like his doughty father and ancestors who included the ill-fated Elizabethan Earl of Essex, Mr. Devereaux led a colorful life, exploring many parts of British Columbia. His escapades with unfriendly Indians and whites in remote parts of the province are legend. At time he stationed armed guards over his survey crews to protect them from Indian raids.

Born in Victoria in 1867, he was educated here and in 1884 joined the firm of Harris and Hargreaves, civil engineers and provincial land surveyors.

While with this firm, he prepared the first contour plan of Victoria, later used for installing the city's sewer system.

ON E & N

In 1883, Mr. Devereaux worked on the E & N Railway and was responsible for the construction of bridges and trestles between Esquimalt and Shawnigan Lake.

Later, he was surveyor for the Indian Reserve Commission and surveyed all Indian lands from the International boundary at the head of Port of Vancouver to Vancouver Island.

Mr. Devereaux made further surveys of Indian lands in the Stewart Lake country in 1894 and Similkameen Valley (1900-2). He also did a great deal of exploration location work for the proposed British Pacific Railway in Kleena-Kleen River Valley and Bute Inlet and for the Kaslo and Slocan Railway in West Kootenay.

From 1903 to 1909, he was assistant city engineer for Victoria. During these years he made surveys of plans of all possible sources of water supplies for the city. These include Elk Lake, Goldstream waterworks and Sooke Lake.

FIRST ENGINEER

In 1907 he became first engineer for Oak Bay and in this capacity was responsible for installing the first sewer system.

In 1909 Mr. Devereaux worked on the reconstruction of the Cariboo Road.

He is survived by two sisters and a brother.

A private funeral service will be held in Haywards's Chapel on Wednesday at 2 p.m. Rev. Canon George Biddle will officiate.

NAVAL SHIP MOVEMENTS

Sussexvale, Antigonish, Ste. Therese, Stettler and Beacon Hill return Friday.

Jonquiere—Out for the day.

Dr. E. N. Boettcher has been elected president of the Community Welfare Council of Greater Victoria, a Red Feather agency, it was announced today.

Roy E. L. Watson was elected vice-president; Mrs. M. Grayson Young, secretary; Gordon Taylor, treasurer.

Seventh annual exhibition of the Victoria Sketch Club will be held May 19-21 in the Douglas Room of Hudson's Bay Co. Close to 120 oils, water colors and pastels will be on display, all done by the club's 40 members.

A special section, to which each member contributed a painting, will deal with the Provincial Museum as seen through artists' eyes.

Mrs. Percy B. Scumrah, wife of the mayor, will officially open the exhibition May 19 at 2:30 p.m.

Highlight was presentation to Miss Janet Carr of the Hornsby-Long trophy, emblematic of the CNIB cribbage championship of B.C.

Other winners in cribbage awards were Charles Hornsby, Thomas Long and Clarence Hyde.

Cemetery Conspiracy Charged at Hearing

ON SPY PLANE

Envoy Puffed Three Times, Said Nothing

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

The nations of the West must continue to co-operate with the United States "regardless of any differences of opinion on the diplomatic front," says Sir Saville Garner, United Kingdom High Commissioner to Canada.

"We must obviously work together at all times," said the suave pipe-smoking British diplomat answering questions at a press conference in the Empress Hotel today.

Tall, good-humored Sir Saville gave reporters a lesson in British diplomacy by refusing the lightest comment on current delicate relations between Russia and the United States.

When asked if he thought the U.S. had caused "a threat" to world peace over the spy plane incident, he looked out of the window, puffed three times on his pipe and said nothing.

ELOQUENT

But he was eloquent and unrestrained when speaking of Anglo-Canadian relations.

"Britain's exports to Canada increased 45 per cent in the first quarter of this year while Canada's exports to the United Kingdom increased by 30 per cent."

"Our trading relations are improving all the time and our relations generally are better than they have ever been."

Sir Saville agreed that while there is "some unemployment" in Canada there is "practically none" in Britain. Britain, he said, needs all the skilled workers she can get but would never discourage immigration to Canada.

WHY STOP NOW?

"We have been sending our sons to Canada for 300 years," he said. "Why should we stop now?"

The high commissioner addressed a joint meeting of the men's and women's Canadian Clubs at the Empress Hotel this afternoon and emphasized that Britain's strength is largely due to her "open door" policy towards immigrants from other nations.

"This is particularly true of the Commonwealth nations," he said. "No British subject is ever refused entry to Britain or the right to work there, even though this sometimes causes inconvenience."

Speaking of his conference with Premier Bennett Monday, the high commissioner said he was "enthusiastic" over the premier's suggestion that British cars should be assembled in B.C.

"The premier will have every opportunity of pursuing this idea," he said. "He will also see some of the fine new highways we are building in Britain to combat the alarming increase in traffic."

RUNNER-UP IN the "Miss Civil Service, 1960" contest in Ottawa today is Myrna Hunter, 21, an attractive brunette who works with the Defence Research Board. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude F. Hunter, 363 Kinver, a graduate of Victoria College and an honors mathematics graduate of University of British Columbia. She will be one of two "princesses" to Diane Chevrete, 23, a government receptionist who was chosen Miss Civil Service and queen of the Ottawa Tulip Festival.

Fire Destroys Saanich Mill

An abandoned Central Saanich lumber mill, idle since 1954, burned to the ground at a loss estimated at $1,000 between 4:30 and 5 a.m. today.

The mill, on Tomlinson Road, just off Steilys Cross Road, was owned by Dave Carson, a resident of Dallas, Oregon.

Central Saanich fire department was called out at 4:45 a.m. when neighboring residents noticed flames in the sky.

The blaze by then had gained a hold on the wooden structure and was beyond salvage.

There were certain items of machinery in the building, but according to the fire department they were of little value.

It was thought spontaneous combustion of decaying sawdust might have caused the fire.

$2,950 Given To City Groups By Koerner Fund

Grants totalling $2,950 have been made to Victoria's art gallery, symphony society and university by the Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation, it was announced today.

They are among 48 grants totalling $70,335 which the foundation has made to culture, education, health, welfare and medical research in British Columbia.

Victoria Art Gallery receives $1,250 for the purchase of pictures for loan to schools, art books to circulate to Vancouver Island centres, and an art reference encyclopedia for the gallery library.

Victoria Symphony Society receives $1,200 to present to two or three young Canadian guest artists with the symphony orchestra, and to add to the orchestra's music library.

The University of Victoria receives a grant of $500 for the development of fine arts.

'U.S. Grave Markers Forced on Public'

By FRANK RUTTER

A "cemetery conspiracy" against the public was charged here today before the Public Utilities Commission.

The PUC was asked to take action against an alliance between cemetery companies and a U.S. manufacturer of grave markers started in Vancouver last Wednesday.

A Victoria monumental manufacturer's brief said the public was forced to buy grave markers made by a U.S. firm for Hatley Memorial Gardens in Colwood.

Mortimer's Monumental Works, represented by lawyer Louis F. Lindholm, said that strict regulations by the cemetery assured that only memorial markers manufactured by Jas. H. Matthews and Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., could be used in the "gardens."

The monument manufacturer's brief also said the use of granite was prohibited by the regulations.

CHEAPER

A granite plot marker would cost between $65 and $175 while a Matthews Pittsburgh bronze marker cost from $88 to $240, it said.

Earlier, the PUC heard evidence about the costs of grave plots and markers.

Chairman Dr. H. F. Angus said the PUC wanted to investigate all aspects of installment buying of plots as well as restrictions by cemeteries.

He said the PUC would consider whether there should be a revision of regulations either by the commission or through the legislature.

Evidence heard in Vancouver indicated, he said, that there should perhaps be an individual approach to cemetery contracts with the PUC considering each contract in the light of local conditions.

EQUAL RULES

Lawyer Allan Cox, representing Colwood Cemeteries — of which Hatley Memorial Gardens is a part — said that his clients preferred equal regulations for all cemeteries and funeral companies.

The Mortimer brief — backed up by Bob Neill of Monumental Crafts, Vancouver — said that Hatley Gardens, Cedar Valley Memorial Gardens in Nanaimo and Memorial Gardens at Alberni all were in the "conspiracy" with the Pittsburgh firm.

ONE RESTRICTION ONLY

The only restrictions desirable, it recommended, were those of size and shape.

Answering Mr. Neill's charges of high costs of bronze markers, Alan Macfarlane, representing Valley View Gardens and Memorial Gardens of Canada, both Vancouver firms, said: "My clients have a number of outside markers by outside manufacturers. They are quite willing to meet free competition provided it meets the standards laid down."

TRAFFIC FINES

In city police court today: Wilbert A. B. Jeeves, 412 Ker, previously fined for speeding over 30 and failing to obey a siren, restricted to business driving only for three months.

Walter W. Finley, 1239 Basil, $35 for careless driving.

Speedway Motors Ltd., 971 Yates, $20 for failing to give written consent for use of dealer licence.

Gerald Robert Irvine, 1837 Kings, $30 and licence suspension for speeding over 30.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. When a person wins a military decoration, VC, MC, MM, etc., does the person receiving the medal get a certificate showing he won it? Where could one write to obtain such a certificate? R.S.T.

A. He or she would receive a copy of the citation leading to the award, either at the time of the investiture or after. To check if an individual medal is warranted, contact the Officer-in-Charge, War Records, Department of Veterans Affairs, Ottawa, Ont.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to dealers.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to The Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Cerebral Palsy Week started Sunday, and will continue until Saturday, but to Orval W. McGregor, a Saanich fireman, cerebral palsy victims are people who need and get assistance the year around.

He is one of the city, Saanich, Esquimalt, Oak Bay, and Navy firemen who give off-duty time to drive Bunny Buses, which take children to and from their homes to the cerebral palsy clinic at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

"Unfrown-wise, we drive the Bunny Bus on our off-duty hours as one of the many little services we donate to the public to help create better relations between the two," he said.

"But personally speaking, I drive the Bunny Bus for the personal satisfaction I get out of helping a child in need plus the gratitude I feel I owe from having three healthy children of my own."

The lady's name is Jonquiere, and her initials are HMCS.

She's a frigate in the Fourth Canadian Escort Squadron, and she's just come out of major refit.

During Jonquiere's post-refit working-up period, she'll take a solo cruise to California waters, and while there will be loaned to a motion picture company for background scenes.

It is unlikely, however, that the lovely lady from Esquimalt will steal the picture.

She's up against real competition—the star of the film, none other than Ferdinand Demara, who plays himself in many roles in the story of his life, "The Great Imposter."

Including, of course, the greatest hoax of all, when he posed as "Dr. Cyr," serving in the Canadian destroyer Cayuga in the Far East.

"The worst part about eating out is my easy chair is several blocks away instead of just a few feet."

Ideas for Shower Gifts To Enrapture Any Bride

By PENNY SAVER

This is the season for brides—and showers! So I've been searching for shower gifts and today I came across some that would appeal to any bride.

If you think that frying pans can't be beautiful you'll be in for a surprise when you see those that come in Danish enameled steel. There are three sizes and price ranges from $3.30 to $4.75. Colors are a decorator's delight. Outer surfaces are all in a matt black while interiors are in soft shades of chartreuse, red, green, white, grey or red. Removable handle is of heat-resistant melamine and fits each size. This is ware that any bride will want to keep on view when neighbors drop in for a friendly cup of coffee.

Same exciting materials are used in line of bowls. Ranging anywhere from $1.90 to $6, depending on size, these could be used for baking, salads, table settings or displaying fruit and flowers.

To team up with bowls, if used for salads, there are strong, slender salad servers that sell at $4.30 a pair. Servers are in black molded melamine.

Danish line also includes beautifully molded dessert plates, priced at $3.25. Any of these items are bound to be used with pride, over and over again.

Every young bride strives to bring a touch of individuality into her new home. This is easily done when she has one or more of the Danish pottery birds I saw today. Exquisite in shape and in natural earthy tones, pieces are lifelike reproductions of wild birds of Denmark. Starting with a perky little sparrow that's priced at $2.75, birds can be bought for anything up to $6.50. Placed near a flower arrangement on a coffee table or on a dining room table or mantel, these will bring attractive interest to any room.

Flowing simplicity marks lines of large round sandwich trays imported from Asia. These are genuine folk pieces, and are fashioned of cane with bark edgings. Stands are in forged black iron.

Owner of store tells me that these are often used as wall decoration or placed above a fireplace to create an interesting effect. Formerly $10.95, trays are now selling for $6. There are only two left so you'd better hurry if you want one.

For information on any of these items give Penny a ring at EV 2-3131.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Mind Your Manners—You'll Be Rewarded

Some people save their good manners for special occasions just as they do their good clothes. The latter is understandable. Not many of us can afford to whip about the supermarket or pluck a child out of a sand-pile when wearing expensive garments.

By good manners I mean gracious behavior. It is certainly an asset to know which fork to use and how to conform to social customs and I do not mean to indicate that such knowledge is unimportant. Anyone who is interested in this and did not have such training at home can learn through reading and observation.

However, the good manners I am thinking of today depend on kindness, and awareness and thoughtfulness of others. Our immediate family and those who work for us and with us are the ones who know what our manners are really like. If we save good manners for special occasions when we are on display before our "public," they will seem sympathetic and appear to be as little a part of us as a stunning costume would if we went about most of the time poorly groomed and in dowdy ill-cared for apparel.

Doesn't it seem too bad that many folks treat their family and those they depend on with a lack of courtesy they would never dare impose on outsiders? It is the day-by-day custom which counts. If we all improved our manners, life would move along so smoothly, and many of the daily irritations would disappear!

DEAR ABBY

The Creative Urge!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a woman who, at age 50, thinks she is a writer? She lets the dishes pile up in the sink and sits up until two and three in the morning typing. She has been writing a "romantic novel" for three years. She let me read some of it and, Abby, it is positively filthy! She says that's what it takes to get a book sold these days.

This "novel" of hers is full of grammatical errors, but that doesn't worry her. She doesn't even have a high school education. I told her if she had so much spare time she should get herself a set of eighth grade school books and begin her education where she left off 38 years ago. How can I get her to give up this foolishness and do something useful with her time?

LONG SUFFERING HUSBAND

DEAR LONG SUFFERING: No wife should pursue a hobby at the expense of her family, but if she is interested in writing professionally, she should take a course in creative writing and learn the fundamentals.

Only a mountain of shocking pink rejection slips will discourage a budding writer, and sometimes it's easier to move a mountain.

DEAR ABBY: My friend and I were discussing something and it turned into sort of an argument, and we want you to settle it for us.

She has been writing a "romantic novel" for three years. She let me read some of it and, Abby, it is positively filthy! She says that's what it takes to get a book sold these days.

This "novel" of hers is full of grammatical errors, but that doesn't worry her. She doesn't even have a high school education. I told her if she had so much spare time she should get herself a set of eighth grade school books and begin her education where she left off 38 years ago. How can I get her to give up this foolishness and do something useful with her time?

DEAR LONG SUFFERING: No wife should pursue a hobby at the expense of her family, but if she is interested in writing professionally, she should take a course in creative writing and learn the fundamentals.

Only a mountain of shocking pink rejection slips will discourage a budding writer, and sometimes it's easier to move a mountain.

Doreen Bickford Wed In Brentwood Church

Pink and white tulips decorated Brentwood United Church for marriage last Saturday of Miss Doreen Elizabeth Bickford and Bruce Clifton, Elvedahl. Bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bickford of Brentwood. Groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. E. Elvedahl of Sidney. Rev. A. K. McMinn officiated at the evening ceremony. Organist was Mrs. H. Marshall. Entering the church on the arm of her father the bride wore a floor-length gown of white nylon net over taffeta topped with a lace jacket with lily-point sleeves. Coronet of iridescent sequins and pearls held the veil of fine net, trimmed with lace. Red roses and lily of the valley were in her bouquet.

Petite Sharon Bickford, younger sister of the bride, was flower girl in a gown of aqua nylon chiffon. Her bouquet was pink marguerites and lily of the valley. All attendants wore flowered headbands. Their necklaces were gifts from the groom.

Wayne Kinghorn was best man and ushers were Ken Mollet and Robert Stepanick.

Pink and white flowers decorated Brentwood Community Hall for a reception. Three-tier wedding cake, set in pink tulle and flanked by white candles and sweetheart roses, centred the bride's table. Uncle of the bride, Frank Rendie, proposed the toast to her happiness.

Powder blue confetti tweed suit and white accessories were chosen by new Mrs. Elvedahl for a honeymoon trip to the United States. On return, newlyweds will make their home at Brentwood.

Mount View Guild, St. Christopher's Anglican Church, tea and sale, Thursday at 2 p.m. Hudson's Bay Douglas Room.

Canada is not bearing its full responsibility in task of clearing European refugee camps.

Accusation prefixed resolution introduced at Local Council of Women meeting Monday in the Public Library's Music Room that urged provincial council to petition the provincial government for increased aid to world refugees.

Twelve resolutions endorsed by local council will be on the agenda of annual meeting of the national council to be held in Niagara Falls, June 24. They dealt with residence laws of Canada, legal requirements of language and citizenship for New Canadians, capital punishment, introduction of art supervisors, and resource teachers in schools and provision of art programs in school broadcasts.

Another resolution, introduced by Mrs. May Campbell, resolutions chairman, demanded careful study of proposed penal reforms.

Allocation of funds for administrative and field staff to ensure Eskimos of an opportunity for political, educational and economic development was endorsed by resolution. Also endorsed were proposals for more detection cancer clinics.

Mooney Walks Out In a Huff

Ald. Millard Mooney walked out of a special council meeting Monday after an argument with acting mayor Arthur Dowell.

The argument came up when council met to formally adopt the 1960 budget and mill rate.

Ald. Mooney was not present at the final budget meeting Wednesday and objected to some of the items cut out during his absence, including $18,000 for boulevard maintenance and $15,000 for public works.

"There has been enough talk on this..." Ald. Dowell began.

Then Ald. Mooney jumped to his feet and protested the motion was going to be put through before he had a chance to get information requested.

OUT SEVEN MINUTES

Then he gathered up his papers and left the council chamber.

He was gone about seven minutes.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgell and

Ald. Mrs. Lily Wilson left the chamber and persuaded him to return.

"I don't know why all this trouble comes when I'm in the chair," said Ald. Dowell. "I must be a poor chairman."

"DRASTIC"

Ald. Mooney called the boulevard maintenance reduction "drastic" and said unless boulevards were kept green tourists would not be attracted here.

He asked that the amount of maintenance be deducted from the city's grant to the publicity bureau. This was defeated.

Then he asked that $10,000 be added from "miscellaneous" to protect the boulevards.

This also was defeated.

Another suggestion, that there be an extra tax charge levied for boulevards, was also voted down.

2.5-MILL BOOST SET IN OAK BAY

Oak Bay council Monday confirmed the mill rate increase at 2.5 mills.

This brings taxes to 41 mills.

Budget for the year is $1,908,635.

Because of the $22 increase in the homeowners' grant, Reeve George Murdoch said "the average homeowner is saving about $7 over last year," despite the mill hike.

The increases cover one mill for wages, 1.07 mills for public works and .43 mills for debt reduction.

Little League Noise Irks Park Residents

Twelve residents living most undesirable part of any around Windsor Park in Oak Bay Monday complained to the municipal council about the noise made at Little League baseball games.

In a letter to council they claimed "for five months of the year, four evenings or more a week, Saturday and Sunday afternoons and evenings, there is so much noise that this section of Oak Bay is surely the most undesirable part of any residential area."

"Twenty or more cars line the narrow road during games, with parking on both sides, constituting a great traffic hazard."

The residents asked Sunday be excluded from ball practice; that games be limited to three days a week; that those in charge try to keep the noise down, and that parking be limited to one side of Transit Road.

RUSH WANTS PENALTIES FOR BOULEVARD 'BUSH'

Esquimalt council will seek legal advice to see if it can levy a charge against householders who refuse to keep tidy or mow the grass on public boulevards fronting their properties.

Coun. Vincent Rush told council Monday there are always a few residents who do nothing to upkeep the boulevard in front of their homes.

"They spoil it for everyone," he said. "In some cases they let the grass grow waist high."

He said it was unfair to allow this to go on after the municipality had spent thousands of dollars in beautifying some of its thoroughfares.

He felt that some legal way might be found to make residents responsible for the upkeep of boulevards fronting their homes.

Battle Looming Over Subdivision

After a lapse of two years, another battle is looming between Esquimalt council and the provincial government over an application for permission to subdivide Craigflower (Christie Point) Peninsula on Portage Inlet.

Coun. G. K. Sammon informed council Monday a move is afoot to press the government to allow a housing development on the woodland peninsula situated four miles from downtown Victoria.

Esquimalt is opposed to any housing development on the 15-acre property on the grounds that septic tanks from homes would pollute the Gorge waters.

Council decided to "clear the decks" and to fight the housing development to "the hilt."

Municipal engineer John Graeme said provincial sanitary engineers claim the use of a special septic tank bordering the inlet would eliminate the danger of pollution.

"This is all nonsense," he said. "Sanitary inspectors of the Union Board of Health claim the opposite. 'We went thoroughly into the matter and are definitely of the opinion that there would be pollution.' The property is situated in unorganized territory and its zoning is under the jurisdiction of the government."

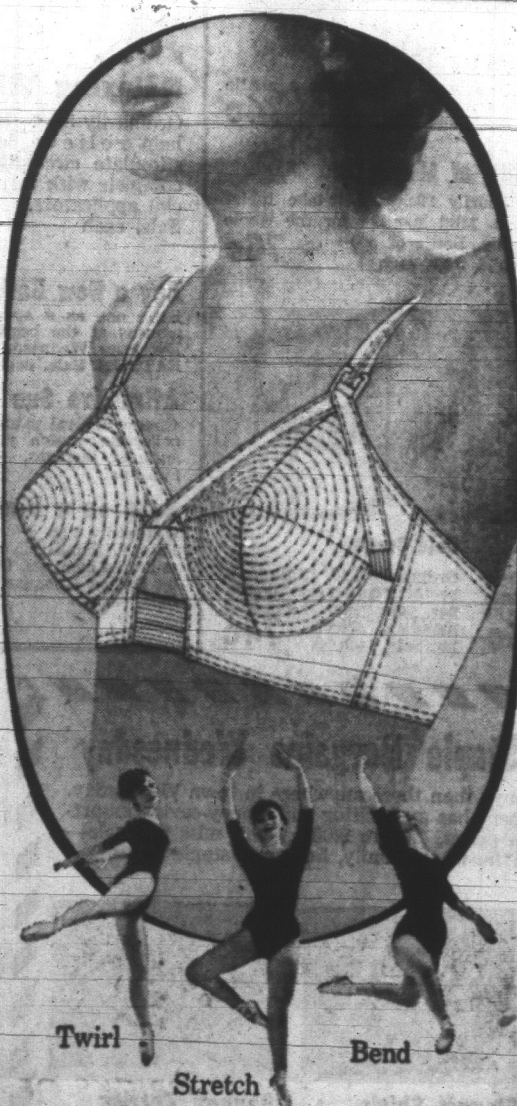

STRONG PROTESTS

Two years ago a similar application was made for rezoning the property for housing development. But it was turned down by the government in the face of strong protests from Esquimalt and adjoining municipalities. View Royal residents and conservation organizations.

At the time, the municipalities and conservation organizations urged the government to buy the property and to turn the peninsula into a park or maintain it as a "green belt."

STREET LIGHTS BY CONTRACT?

City engineer James Garnett Monday was instructed by city public works committee to investigate street lighting by private contractors rather than the city.

The suggestion came from Ald. Geoffrey Edgell who said there could be a saving if the plan was adopted.

As chairman of the public works committee he said a private firm in Victoria is willing to hire city lighting department employees and do job.

Expert Checks Water Figures

Esquimalt council Monday authorized its municipal solicitor to engage a chartered accountant to check figures supplied by the city backing its proposed 40 to 50 per cent boost in water rates.

Council's decision followed a report from solicitor W. R. McIntyre who conducted a preliminary check on figures supplied by the city to support its claims for increased rates.

Mr. McIntyre recommended a detailed investigation of the finances of the waterworks department because, he said, he wasn't satisfied with the city's financial statements.

U.S. Atom Sub Circles World in 84 Days Under Sea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House announced today that the nuclear-powered submarine Triton had travelled 41,519 miles around the world in a historic 84-day voyage under water.

The Triton, largest submarine ever built, submerged off Montauk Point, Long Island, Feb. 16 and did not surface completely again until this morning off Rehoboth Beach, Del.

There, a helicopter picked up the Triton's commanding officer—Capt. Edward L. Beach of Palo Alto, Calif.—and flew him immediately to the White House where President Eisenhower conferred on him the Legion of Merit.

The Triton then proceeded to her home port of New London, Conn., where she was due Wednesday.

The historic voyage, known as "Operation Magellan," followed approximately the early 16th century course of the explorer Ferdinand Magellan whom history credits with making the first around-the-world cruise.

The 7,750-ton Triton, commissioned last Nov. 10, is about the size of a light cruiser and carries two atomic reactors and two entirely independent propulsion plants.

The Triton's skipper was Eisenhower's first naval aide at the White House. Beach has a distinguished record in the submarine service and is an outstanding author. His best-selling novel, "Run Silent, Run Deep," was a literary hit several seasons ago.

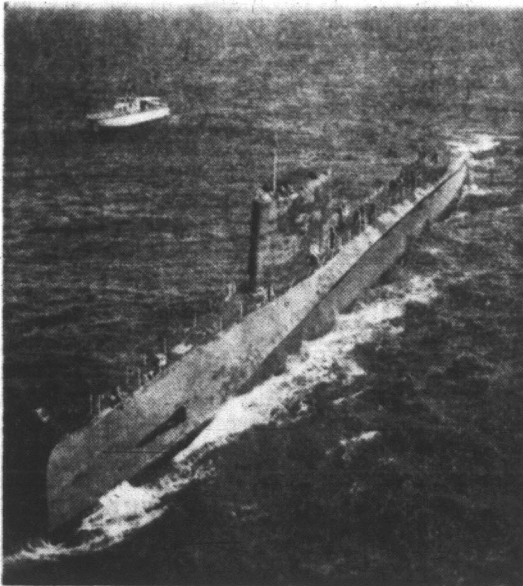

The President, in pinning the medal on Beach, hailed him for an "extraordinary accomplishment."

Beach was hustled secretly to the White House from his mammoth submarine which had surfaced before daybreak 12 miles off the Delaware coast.

His log had showed there was some difficulty with the submarine's diving planes and garbage ejection system and he was asked whether there were other difficulties during the trip.

"Yes, when the smoking lamp was out," Beach wrote, referring to a two-week period during the trip when smoking was banned by psychologists aboard the Triton.

"The psychologists suffered more than anyone else. They also like to smoke and the crew said they were a bunch of sadists."

USS Triton surfaces at home port today.

The Triton was gone so long that 42 members of her crew were promoted while undersea and eight became fathers.

The vessel broached — partially surfaced — twice during the cruise, once on March 25 off the coast of Uruguay to transfer a critically-ill chief petty officer to the cruiser USS Macon, and again off Cadiz, Spain, on May 2 after the actual circumnavigation of the globe.

This particular surfacing was to pay homage to Magellan who sailed from Cadiz under the Spanish flag in 1519.

For the remainder of the voyage the Triton was completely submerged, mostly below periscope depth.

The round-the-world cruise was clocked from Montauk Point although the Triton sailed originally from New London. She proceeded first to St. Paul Rocks, a small island group 55 miles north of the equator and off the eastern tip of Brazil.

This, according to the navy, was the reference point for the actual circumnavigation, the point to which the Triton returned before proceeding to the Spanish coast.

She left St. Paul Rocks Feb. 24 bound for Cape Horn, but had to change course to transfer the petty officer, suffering from kidney stones, to the Macon. This put the Triton several days behind schedule and added some 2,000 miles to her journey.

She passed Cape Horn March 7 and set out underwater for Easter Island, passing about 1,200 miles south of Hawaii. She arrived off Guam March 28 and travelled thence to the Philippine Islands, passing near Magellan Bay where the 16th century navigator was killed.

The Triton sailed south toward Indonesia, passing through the Makassar and Lombok straits and west-southwest to the Cape of Good Hope. She went around the tip of Africa April 17 and returned to St. Paul Rocks April 25, thus completing her trip around the world.

CANADA'S ROLE IN DEFENCE

By TOM GOULD

OTTAWA — Over the past 10 years Canadian defence policies have been increasingly subordinated to those of the United States.

Today, Canada is a junior-grade military satellite of the U.S.

We have gone so far on the road to integration that a small group of U.S. congressmen can actually dictate the weapons that Canadian forces are to be equipped with.

Perhaps it was inevitable, considering the awesome power of the United States, that such integration would become a one-way street, that the word partnership applied to U.S.-Canadian defence would be a misnomer.

Anyone who doubts that such a situation exists should give careful study to the sorry story of the Bomarc-B anti-aircraft missile.

There are obvious reasons why Canada adopted the Bomarc-B for its "front line of defence," and not all of them have to do with the cost of the scrapped Avro Arrow interceptor.

A look at a map of North America will provide the explanation. See how Ontario dips down into the Great Lakes, and how the lakes themselves push the U.S. border far to the south. U.S. defence planners, who at one time envisaged a chain of Bomarc stations running up the U.S. west coast, along the border, and down the east coast, were very concerned at the Great Lakes Gap.

More Inevitable

The only way to fill the gap was to get Canada to install Bomarc bases of her own.

Did Canada want the Bomarc-B in the first place? A day or two before Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced Canada was going to obtain the missile, this reporter had a discussion with Defence Minister Pearkes in his Centre Block office. The Bomarc came up in the discussion, and here is what the defence minister said about it:

"I am not sold on the Bomarc."

The air force recommended against its acquisition, and there are recurring reports in Ottawa that the Defence Research Board told the government Bomarc would be obsolete before it was installed, if it managed to get airborne.

Certainly the alternatives were not pleasant. The government could have continued the Avro Arrow interceptor program, at some fabulous cost; or it could have

Freeze-Up Eases Flood Danger

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Freezing temperatures slowed the rise of the swollen Mattagami River today and spurred hopes that a critical flooding situation in suburban Mountjoy Township had passed its peak.

But emergency crews remained on a constant alert in Mountjoy where nearly 700 persons were evacuated from homes Monday, many of them by boats along streets swirling with up to six feet of icy, dirty river water.

The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission reported water at its key dam at Wawatim Falls, 22 miles upstream, was holding its level.

The river was seven feet above normal at midnight, breaking the mark set in 1947, before many of Mountjoy's present residential areas were established.

Other areas of Ontario were also beset by floods. At Pembroke the Ottawa River reached its highest level in 10 years and was still rising. Summer cottages were submerged to their window sills. Agriculture experts said the rains could reduce crop yields by delaying seedings.

RUSS USE SOFTER TONE

Protest Made 'Pleasantly'

(Times News Services)

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union protested formally to the United States today about the flying spy mission of the American U-2 jet plane allegedly shot down over Siberia May 1.

A news conference held at the U.S. Embassy disclosed that a protest note over the incident had been handed to American Charge d'Affaires Edward Fereers by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko during a "correct and pleasant" interview at the foreign ministry this morning.

But the circumstances surrounding its presentation indicated a Soviet softening of the propaganda barrage against the United States in view of next week's summit meeting in Paris.

U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson had a long talk with Khrushchev Monday night at a Czechoslovak reception in which he first broached the subject of seeing the pilot.

At the party, Khrushchev held Thompson's right hand between both of his while assuring the American he was positive Thompson personally knew nothing of the plane flight.

In a friendly tone, Khrushchev assured the ambassador that he felt sorry for him because of the spot he was put in as the U.S. representative. This contrasted with Khrushchev's blunt outspokenness to the Norwegian ambassador, Oscar Gunderson.

"You knew about these flights," Khrushchev said to the Norwegian diplomat. "I can see it in your eyes."

If intelligence missions are continued over Soviet soil, the premier said in a speech Monday night at a Czechoslovak Embassy reception, "we shall bring down the planes, just bring them down."

"If such flights are repeated, we shall take appropriate counter-measures."

Amid his taunts at the U.S. government and his warnings, the premier also sounded a conciliatory note, saying:

"Our strength is being tested. Therefore let us not draw conclusions aggravating relations between countries; such conclusions as would hamper us in the future, even, I should like to say, in building good relations with the U.S.A."

Seems logical that th' plane spyin' on Russia was a "U-2."

Guess them submarine fellers found there ain't much use writin' under water if y' can't mail it home.

Mister Khrushchev's tryin' to hit a home run with th' missile bases loaded.

RUSSIA TO TRY U.S. FLIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia has informed the United States that the captured American spy pilot will be brought to trial under Soviet law.

The state department declined to make public the text, saying it believed Moscow would make it known.

Informed officials said, however, that the note advised that the pilot, 39-year-old Francis G. Powers, would be brought to account under Soviet law.

It also was disclosed that in return the United States has formally requested an interview with Powers.

Khrushchev has said that officials will be permitted to see Powers "in due course."

American officials said all that was contemplated was to ask about Powers' welfare, how he was treated and if he has legal assistance. There would be no "cross-examination" of him on accounts of the incident.

Macmillan's aides said Khrushchev's letters do not call for a reply.

If any issues relating to the conference have still to be settled—its duration for instance—they presumably will be taken up when the Big Four meet.

The Western three are thinking of a week-long conference which, if things go well, could be extended into a second week. Eisenhower, however, has to face the problem of fitting in an official visit to Portugal, now set for May 23.

Will Fulfil Commitments With Allies

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States today pledged to support its Allies with force if Russia molests their bases for permitting U.S. reconnaissance flights.

State Department press officer Lincoln White said the U.S. would honor its commitments "for the common defence" of countries which "once again appear to be subjected to a policy of intimidation by the Soviet government."

The blunt statement was the U.S. answer to Soviet Premier Khrushchev's assertion that if more American flights are made over Russia from foreign bases "we shall hit at those bases."

Khrushchev declared at a reception in Moscow Monday night that Russia would shoot down any more U.S. planes invading her territory and would retaliate against other countries which let espionage planes use their bases.

White's remarks came as the House appropriations committee said that last week's ill-fated spy flight over Russia was one of a series approved by the White House and known in advance to key members of Congress.

He praised the Central Intelligence Agency for arranging the flights.

Cannon, one of a group of Congressional leaders briefed secretly Monday on the spy mission by top administration officials, told the House that in addition to the essential military information they turned up, the flights completely disproved Russia's claimed ability to stop American bombers at her borders.

He said the fact is the U-2 reconnaissance plane which Russia claims to have shot down last week "developed some unforeseen and unavoidable mechanical or physiological defect."

Secretary of State Christian A. Herter indicated in a statement Monday this country would continue reconnaissance flights until the Soviets agree to international safeguards against surprise attacks.

White's statement was made at a news conference today in answer to reporters' questions. He speaks officially for the state department.

White did not use the word force, but he made it plain that the United States would go to the defence of any country that came under attack as threatened by Khrushchev.

"It is typical," White said, "that the Soviet government singles out as the objective of its threats those smaller countries of the free world who bear no responsibility for the recent incident."

White said this meant the United States was exonerating Pakistan, Turkey and Norway from any responsibility in the flight.

Spy Flight Not Mentioned In K's Notes on Summit

(See Also Page 3)

LONDON (AP) — Premier Khrushchev in new notes to the Western Big Three accepts various proposals for conducting the summit conference in Paris and makes no mention of the U.S. spy plane incident, informed British sources said today.

Coming immediately after Khrushchev's denunciation of the aerial intrusion over the Soviet Union, the letters underline Western confidence that the summit meeting will be essentially unaffected by the plane episode.

In his letters to President Eisenhower, Prime Minister Macmillan and President de Gaulle, Khrushchev agreed that the talks be conducted in absolute secrecy when they open Monday, informants said.

The Soviet premier also accepted various other proposals submitted to him recently by de Gaulle as host of the conference and on behalf of the Western Big Three.

These arrangements relate to the organization of the conference, times of meeting, the role of foreign ministers and so forth.

Macmillan's aides said Khrushchev's letters do not call for a reply.

If any issues relating to the conference have still to be settled—its duration for instance—they presumably will be taken up when the Big Four meet.

The Western three are thinking of a week-long conference which, if things go well, could be extended into a second week. Eisenhower, however, has to face the problem of fitting in an official visit to Portugal, now set for May 23.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — A 48-year-old domestic servant and his wife were left $100,000, the will of an 82-year-old widow showed Monday. Their two daughters were given $30,000 apiece for their education.
"I'd rather have her with me," she was such a dear sweet woman," William Denmon said. Mrs. John B. Wallis Jr., widow of a prominent industrialist, left the Denmons the $100,000 together with her automobile and household goods. She also said Denmon should live in her 12-room house in suburban Kingston at full salary for a period of not more than one year while looking for other quarters and employment.

Spy Flights By Britain Says Paper

LONDON (Reuters) — A London newspaper says, Britain has been flying spying missions over Communist countries, but that these now have been suspended until further notice.
The foreign office declined to comment on the report, carried by the Daily Express. The newspaper report says the flights were controlled by the foreign office through secret service, which was directly responsible to Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd.
It says the flights have been restricted to intrusions near the border of Communist countries, so that the planes could get back over friendly territory if challenged.

Spy Plane Incident Up Before UN 'Soon'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, Arkady Sobolev, said Monday night he expects to bring the case of the American U-2 shot down over Russia before the UN Security Council soon.

CONTROL OF SPY OFFICE DEMANDED IN CONGRESS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alleged fumbling and continued "blank cheque" spending by the Central Intelligence Agency brought fresh demands in Congress today to put the spy office under congressional surveillance.
It was learned that the CIA gets close to $400,000,000 a year for its world-wide intelligence work, under an arrangement so secret only a handful of congressmen know the sum and none knows exactly where all the money goes.

Plane Wreck Claimed Fake

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — The designer of America's U-2 airplane said Friday night he doubts Russian claims of having shot down one of the high-flying, long-range planes.

He believes instead that some mechanical failure of the mystery-craft might have allowed it to fall intact into Russian possession. Photographs of wreckage purporting to be of the downed craft were faked by Russia, he said.

C. L. Johnson, veteran Lockheed design engineer, based his statement on a close study of the photographs released by Russia.

"I am convinced that the Russians for some reason have released pictures of some other airplane crash," said Johnson. He added the pictures probably were those of a wrecked Russian beagle bomber.

"I do not believe they shot down the U-2 either with a missile or another aircraft," said Johnson in a prepared statement released by Lockheed, maker of the craft.

"If they have the U-2 it is because some mechanical or oxygen failure caused it to descend far below its normal cruising altitude (reported to be at about 10 miles)."

Johnson designer of such other aircraft as the air force's F80 and the F104 jets, said the Russian-released photographs did not match the design characteristics of the U-2.

"Using the original wire picture, not one single U-2 part could be identified in the wreckage," said Johnson.
He said he based his doubt of the Russian claim of shooting down the craft on grounds that serial photographs taken from the U-2 probably would have been destroyed in the wreckage, much of which appeared damaged by fire.

Johnson also noted crowds of Russian men, women and children were shown gathered around the wrecked plane in the Russian-released photographs. He said it was highly unlikely civilians would have been allowed so close to such an important craft, even if it had been wrecked.

It was his belief, Johnson indicated, that Russian technical and espionage experts have hidden away the U-2 — if they have it — for study.

CANADA GIVES U.S. A HINT:

'Stop All Spying Flights'

OTTAWA (CP) — Without tinned until Soviet secrecy is actually putting it into words, relaxed. Officials here are said to feel that in the world situation of today Washington should have tight control over such a delicate matter.
Informants said today that the suggestion was implicit in the Commons statement by External Affairs Minister Green Monday that a continuation of such incidents might trigger a nuclear war.
In this way, Canada was telling the U.S. that it is strongly opposed to any further reconnaissance flights over Communist territory.

BLUNT AS POSSIBLE
It is understood that Mr. Green tried to be as blunt as possible without giving offense to the U.S. and without presuming to interfere in an American administrative responsibility.

In other words, if the U.S. feels it must continue the spy flights there is nothing concrete Canada can do to halt them.

CANADA'S DEFENCE

asked the U.S. to station U.S. interceptors or squadrons on Canadian soil.

The latter proposition would have had adverse political repercussions, and, in addition, U.S. military men didn't take too enthusiastically to the idea, since U.S. politicians do not like the idea of shifting thousands of personnel, and their payroll, from U.S. bases to Canadian bases.

There was another possibility, that of the U.S. Air Force buying sufficient Arrows to lower the price. The U.S. flatly rejected this proposal. The U.S. has never purchased a major weapon outside of the U.S.

The aircraft lobby in Washington shuddered at the very thought.

Here is where the NORAD concept of a defence partnership initially failed. For if the U.S. was solely concerned with the defence of North America, and if it believed, as it apparently still does, that interceptors are required for such defence, it should have bought the Arrow.

The Arrow was, and still would be, the best interceptor available to meet the needs of high-speed, high-altitude defence against the manned bomber over Canadian soil.

To this day, no one in the Pentagon has been able to deny that fact.

'Canada Gave In'

Canada gave in to Washington. The Bomarc was cheap, and the U.S. even offered to pay two-thirds of the total cost of installing the missiles and their ground-control guidance system, known as SAGE. Canada's one-third involved digging holes and pouring concrete.

The Bomarc-B was also a pig in a poke. At the time we grabbed it, it was still on the drawing boards. To this day it hasn't reached an altitude much beyond that of an engineer's draughting table.

No Explanation

The Conservative propaganda machine in Ottawa sold the idea to the Canadian public. Here was the cheap alternative to the expensive Arrow. The Arrow was obsolete. Its backers were despicable lobbyists. The aircraft had too short a range (on a one-way flight). Bomarc had glamor.

No one bothered to explain why, if the Arrow was obsolete against the diminishing, or the diminished depending on what cabinet minister is talking — threat of the manned bomber, the Bomarc wasn't equally obsolete.

No one bothered to explain why Canada still clings to her ancient CF-100s in the home defence squadrons if both the Arrow and the Bomarc are obsolete.

BUSINESS VIEWS

'Builders More Than Creators'

By HAL MALONE
Times Business Editor

A group of B.C. architects, meeting in Victoria recently, had some sharp comments on crackerbox houses.

Too much sameness, generally unattractive, potential slums.

Malone

week, that is. Then Jack M. Soules, president of the Canadian Construction Association, had this to say:

"I don't hear the people living in crackerboxes, it is what they are, complaining too much."

"Certainly some contractors are less enterprising than they could be in small house building. But generally speaking, members of the construction industry are forced by the law of economics to build what the public wants."

"Contractors are builders more than creators. What looks especially fancy and sleek on a drawing board doesn't necessarily represent what the prospective new home buyer wants. Or what he can afford."

"The cry over crackerboxes deals with small house construction—900 to 1,100 square feet. A builder has to consider when he puts up a house that size what mortgage is available, how much down payment will be required."

"You turn a contractor loose on a $12,000 house," said Mr. Soules, "and he's just likely to spend $10,000 on the living room alone."

Not a contractor but at least a semi-authority on accommodation Russian-style is Edward Stamm.

Forest consultant Stamm told the Olympic Loggers Conference here last week that housing, as such, is practically non-existent in Russia.

A seven-week, 7,000-mile tour of the steppes showed him that Ivan is putting all his efforts into a "colossal apartment block program."

"In every city we saw giant cranes by the dozen working on new apartment blocks. Home-building is practically impossible. The emphasis on apartments arises out of Russia's determination not to waste anything—even space. The Russians have figured out that every adult is entitled to a total living space not to exceed 84 square feet by 8.2 square feet."

"The apartment blocks are divided into units supposedly adequate for four families, in actual practice it works out so that a Russian couple have one large room which serves as bedroom, living room, dining room and den. The washroom and toilet is a community affair. To do the laundry the block's occupants get a ticket-telling them the exact hour and day each week they have access to the facilities. Miss your turn and you have to go like the devil, next week to get it all done."

Construction-wise, Mr. Stamm said the apartments were "shoddily built."

"It wasn't uncommon to see the mortar and brick falling off in the first two months of 1960. Cigarette consumption increased by 2 per cent. . . . Cigar lovers boosted consumption by a fat 10.4 per cent."

MARKET SUMMARIES

Doldrums Continue In Toronto Trading

The Toronto market headed downward today as industrials led trading further into the doldrums.

Canada Packers B led industrials lower, off 1/4 at 43 1/2, while Alberta Gas, Canada Cement and Corby Distillers A off 1/4 at 20 1/2, 26 1/2 and 16 1/2, Abitibi off 1/4 at 39 1/2 and Imperial Oil and Steel Company of Canada off 1/4 at 30 1/2 and 74 1/2.

On the plus side, Canadian Tire moved ahead 1/4 at 18 1/2, Traders Finance B up 1/4 at 35 1/2, Weston B up a point at 34 1/2 and Traders Finance A and Westeel up 1/4 at 36 1/2 and 15 1/2.

AT MONTREAL

The stock exchange dipped slightly today in light trading.

AT LONDON distinctly steadier conditions developed in the industrial market today. But there was no improvement elsewhere.

The main feature was the weakness of copper shares following the disturbances in the Rhodesian copper belt.

Small losses predominated in dollar stocks, reflecting the uncertain trend.

AT VANCOUVER

Trading was quiet with little change in prices during the forenoon. Royal Canadian Ventures moved 10,000 at 14. Cowichan Copper traded 2,000 at 35. Cragmont sold 2,000 at $4.80. Con. Potash traded 3,000 at 25. Torwest moved 3,000 at 14.

Shipyard Wages Standardization Aim of Unions

MONCTON, N.B. (CP)—Eastern shipyard unions adopted national standardization of wages and working conditions as a long-term objective during a weekend meeting here.

A statement issued following the meeting of 60 delegates representing 10,000 union employees of about a dozen shipyards in the Maritimes and Quebec said the objective could be more easily attained by "having the industry brought under the federal labor code rather than provincial legislation."

AT NEW YORK

among Canadian stocks, Aluminum Ltd. up 1/4, was a lonely gainer while Granby Mining and McIntyre Porcupine lost 1/4 and Canadian Pacific, Distillers Seagrams and International Nickel lost 1/4.

On the American Exchange, Canadian Marconi and Brazilian Traction lost 1/4, Eureka, Preston East Dome and Jupiter Oils 1/16. Shawinigan gained 1/4.

AT OTTAWA

(CP)—Most grain prices were irregular in a moderately active trade on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

The United Kingdom was credited with purchasing 400,000 bushels of Canadian barley and small quantities of flax. France was also a buyer of parcel lots of flax.

The flax market reflected the export business to some extent.

Some selling in flax was prompted by lower linseed oil prices on the continent.

Oats and barley trade disclosed some shipping demand. Rye trade was quiet.

Overnight export loadings of Canadian wheat included: United Kingdom 370,000 bushels; Belgium 180,000; West Germany 200,000; Norway 135,000; Algeria 400,000.

Lakehead prices for class two, IWA and domestic wheat all were unchanged from Monday.

Court Delays Lumber Firm Tax Case Ruling

OTTAWA (CP)—Judgment was reserved Monday by the Supreme Court of Canada in an action by the British Columbia government to levy sales tax on certain equipment used by Alaska Pine & Cellulose, Ltd.

The British Columbia finance department ordered the company to pay sales tax under the province's Social Services Tax Act on chemical substances or catalysts used in connection with the production of wood pulp.

The B.C. Supreme Court upheld the finance department but the B.C. Court of Appeal ruled that the material is not taxable under the act.

The British Columbia government asked the Supreme Court to reverse the appeal court's judgment.

Selecting Hearing Aids

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic and Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation I was just reading a book by Dr. Norton Canfield, of Yale University, called "A Hearing Handbook for Laymen" (Doubleday). As the doctor points out, in the last few years, hearing aids have been getting ever smaller and more efficient. Now, they can give back a useful and interesting life to most hard-of-hearing people. Curiously, not all who are now hard-of-hearing seem really to want to hear better. When people try an aid, they hear a lot of queer and strange sounds, some of which they do not like.

Alvarez

The aid will enable the person to hear voices, but these voices will probably not sound quite like they used to. Their timbre will be changed. Few people like their aid at first; it will take them a while to get used to it. The selection of the best aid for the individual may take some time, and expert help may be needed.

A person using an aid should go occasionally to try out a new one because each manufacturer is constantly making improvements. Before going to choose an aid, one should get an audiometric test which will show just what sort of hearing loss one has. The expert can tell from the record how much difficulty the patient is likely to have in getting an aid that will help him.

Dr. Canfield advises the patient to deal only with well-established firms which are responsible and kindly, and have a reputation to sustain. In choosing a suitable aid it is helpful to listen to familiar music. Some persons with a very sensitive skin may not be able to tolerate something inserted in their external ear canal. Often the "insert" that goes into the ear canal should be molded to fit. Even small air "leaks" around it can cause squeals or imperfect hearing. Rubber "washers" can sometimes solve the problem.

The otologist (ear specialist) who measures the hearing in the two ears can decide whether the person needs two aids or only one. Occasionally, the cleaning of much wax out of the ear canals will restore hearing.

A person with good hearing in only one ear can be much handicapped in a crowd

where everyone is talking. Two aids, one in each ear can often give so-called binaural or stereophonic hearing, which is very helpful.

Some 5 per cent of people need to use a "bone conduction aid." Such bone receivers need a lot more electric power than do air receivers. Some persons can hear sounds better with an aid, but they cannot make out words as well as they would like to.

Dr. Canfield thinks that people who must think of expense can often get by with one of the cheaper aids. The smaller the aid the smaller will be the batteries and hence the more often they will have to be renewed. The expense per year for upkeep can be anything from $5 to $50. In some places there are hearing centres where the person can try several makes of instrument. It is well for the hard-of-hearing person to take with him a relative or friend when he goes a-purchasing. This may save misunderstandings and trouble.

How long will an aid last? Dr. Canfield advises changing every three to five years. It is good to keep taking advantage of the constant improvements being made. The person should get a year's guarantee, and he should find out if in his city he can get service and parts and batteries. This is very important. The buyer would often do well not to be too vain, and hence too anxious to get the smallest possible instrument. People who are hard of hearing should remember that their deafness can be even more obvious than would be a hearing aid! Why not, then, get the aid that gives the best hearing?

I, personally, always feel extra kindly to the person with a hearing aid; I guess I am glad to see that he has the good sense to wear the apparatus. But, actually, he did not need much sense; I have worn glasses for the last 66 years, and I never even know I have them on.

The wearing of them never embarrassed me for a minute. They make an active and useful and rich life possible for me. Similarly, if I should lose much of my hearing, I would gladly wear an aid because it would bring me sounds, speech, music, laughter, fun, and enriching contacts with the world.

The aid would keep me from growing solitary, and perhaps eccentric and suspicious and crabbed. It would enable me to hold fast to my friends, and it would enable me to hang onto my job which makes life worth living for me.

FAITH BIG NEED MONTY DECLARES

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Western world needs leaders with a faith in Christianity as strong as the Communists' faith in communism, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery said Monday night.

"Our task today is to inspire the youth of the British Commonwealth with a common moral purpose," he said.

A leader must have moral integrity, courage, sound judgment, vision, enthusiasm, ability to get along with and inspire fellow men and a high intelligence, he said.

Then he mentioned juvenile delinquency — "a more convenient expression for parental neglect," he called it — and said:

"The most important thing in the education of our youth is a sense of purpose so strong as to enable a young man to face up to and overcome all difficulties. Such a purpose can be built only on faith, and that faith can be given only in youth."

"But it must be good faith

that's the foundation on which our leadership training should be based."

Royal Wedding Got Little Space

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — Die Transvaaler, official organ of the ruling Nationalist party in Transvaal province, carried the news of Princess Margaret's wedding in two paragraphs at the bottom of its front page.

In 1947, when the present South African premier, Hendrik Verwoerd, was editor, the newspaper published nothing on the visit of the Royal Family to South Africa.

"I Walked Through The City of Death"

Star Weekly writer Lloyd Lockhart saw searchers tear aside the rubble of Agadir looking for survivors buried alive by the earthquake's fury. He saw heartbreak and heroism. He also saw politics slowing rescue efforts. Read this vivid account of Morocco's horrifying two-second disaster in this week's Star Weekly.

HOME GARDEN

By JACK BEASTALL

For Exhibition or Supper

The industrial workers of the English Midlands are very jealous of the leaks they grow, and competition at the local shows is so keen the judges use rules and calipers to decide the winners.

The leak, a very mildly flavored onion, is judged for the length and width of the blanched or white, portion of the plant.

I hesitate to state the dimensions of some of the reported winners because many ex-Midlanders will recall larger and better specimens they have seen or grown, but it's safe to say that anything less than 12 inches long and two inches thick would be considered very poor.

MAY 1-15

The plants are started indoors from seed, the same as we do here, and the seedlings set out in the open garden between May 1 and 15.

The previously prepared site is made rich with plenty of good compost and a balanced fertilizer (or a home-made mixture) raked into the surface.

Planting is quite simple. Holes are made in the soil and a seedling is dropped into each so that only about one-half inch extends above soil level.

A small amount of water poured into the holes washes sufficient soil around the roots, and the holes eventually are filled during the course of cultivation.

As growth proceeds, soil is drawn towards the stems and banked around them to increase the length of the whitened portion.

This method is worth trying if you are growing for exhibition. In any case, it will give you some good leaks for supper next winter.

Soviet Ties Restored By Cuba

HAVANA (AP) — The Cuban government announced Saturday night the resumption of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union.

The announcement came in a statement from Premier Fidel Castro's ministry of foreign relations. It said diplomatic ties between the two countries, suspended when Cuba was ruled by Fulgencio Batista, were being re-established at the embassy level.

Diplomatic sources here predicted the Castro government will soon exchange ambassadors with Communist China. The Nationalist Chinese government still maintains formal relations with Cuba.

There have been frequent indications that Castro favors adding diplomatic relations to the commercial and cultural ties his government already had established with Peking.

Floods End Drought

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Two days of floods took 14 lives in this British island colony, four of them children, a government spokesman said Saturday. Flooding followed sudden rains which broke the colony's worst winter drought in 70 years and added nearly 8,000,000 gallons to the water supply.

Nikita to Ghana

LONDON (Reuters) — Nikita Khrushchev has accepted an invitation to visit Ghana at "a convenient time," the Soviet news agency Tass has reported.

... HERE AND THERE ...

With NORMAN CRIBBENS

What kind of British people should be encouraged to come to British Columbia?

We put this question to Premier Bennett at his last press conference, and he replied nurses, teachers, secretaries, stenographers and those who have supreme confidence in themselves.

The premier seemed to attach particular virtue to the word confidence. Yet when asked if newspapermen should be encouraged to come out here, he replied with a grin: "I think we could export a few first."

City sightseeing driver Rebel Mowat is one of the many Victorians who think Foul Bay Road should not be changed to University Drive.

"I get more inquiries about the name Foul Bay Road than anywhere else," says Rebel, "and the replies are always interesting. Either it was the rocks which threatened to foul incoming craft, or it was the fowl of the air."

"But who in heck is going to ask any questions about a stuffy name like University Drive?"

Maestro Billy Tickle, retiring next Saturday evening after 35 years at the Empress Hotel, is getting greetings and goodwill messages from all across Canada and up and down the Pacific coast.

"You must be the oldest dance band leader in the world," writes a fan from Eugene, Oregon.

"Don't know if I am the oldest," says 67-year-old Billy, "but I don't think anyone else has led a hotel band as long as I have."

Does Mr. Tickle think his dance music is out of date? Not a bit of it.

"Melody and good, clean rhythm are never out of date," he says.

Another Victoria musician, Don Partridge, is going strong as organist at Seattle's newest restaurant bar, The Golden Lion.

Though well appreciated, he writes: "I am still a Canadian at heart. But you can only beat your head against a red-brick wall for so long. Then it begins to hurt."

Don used to play at the Strathcona Hotel on Douglas Street.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

Traffic tickets with "built-in summons" were scheduled to go into use in two Greater Victoria RCMP jurisdictions today.

Colwood and Sidney RCMP detachments are believed among the first on Vancouver Island to receive copies of the new tickets, recently approved for general use in unorganized territories of the province.

The ticket is in four parts, supplying one copy to the alleged violator as his summons to court, one copy as an information for court use, a third copy for Motor Vehicle Branch driving records and the fourth for police records.

Annual "Red Shield" campaign on behalf of the Salvation Army in Greater Victoria will open next Monday with an objective of $42,500—the same as last year—set for the month-long drive.

Campaign chairman is Peter S. Taylor.

The campaign will consist of door-to-door canvassing by volunteers, who are still needed.

Persons wishing to assist are asked to contact Mrs. M. L. Bishop at EV 3-9482.

Sports trophies for members of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind were scheduled to be presented at 3 p.m. today at CNIB headquarters.

Highlight was presentation to Miss Janet Carr of the Hornsby-Long trophy, emblematic of the CNIB cribbage championship of B.C.

Other winners in cribbage and table bowling to receive awards were Charles Hornsby, Thomas Long and Clarence Hyde.

Victor Credit Union president Robert F. Williams, 1012 Finlayson, will attend the 26th annual meeting of the Credit Union National Association in Madison, Wis., May 14-15.

He will represent the 193,500 members of B.C.'s 326 credit unions.

Mr. Williams is also treasurer of the Greater Victoria Credit Union Chapter and first vice-president of the B.C. Credit Union League.

A panel of three Victoria lawyers will participate in a discussion tonight on "Bankruptcy."

The discussion, sponsored by the Victoria Credit Granters Association, will be held at 6 p.m. in the Pacific Club.

Taking part will be John Cowan, Edwin Popham and W. A. Buchanan. Moderator will be H. L. Matthews.

The CCF this month will name three more candidates for the next provincial election.

Party leader Robert Strachan said Monday he will speak at nominating conventions in Penticton, May 27; Kamloops, May 28, and Trail, May 30.

Seventh annual exhibition of the Victoria Sketch Club will be held May 19-21 in the Douglas Room of Hudson's Bay Co.

Close to 120 oils, water-colors and pastels will be on display, all done by the club's 40 members.

A special section, to which each member contributed a painting, will deal with the Provincial Museum as seen through artists' eyes.

Mrs. Percy B. Scurrah, wife of the mayor, will officially open the exhibition May 19 at 2:30 p.m.

Fabrication of the Atlas missile will be subject of an address by Abraham Hurlich, head of the materials research group, Convair Astronautics, San Diego, at a meeting May 17 at 8 p.m. of the Vancouver Island Branch, Engineering Institute of Canada.

The meeting will be in the Flame Room of the B.C. Electric.

Albert Copp, 2435 Trans-Canada Highway, was fined $200 and $9 costs when he pleaded guilty in Colwood RCMP court Monday to a charge of impaired driving.

Annual Oak Bay Scout Hall Fair will be held at Fireman's Park Saturday, May 28 at 1 p.m. There will be rides for the kiddies, a sale of home cooking, white elephant, fish pond and tea from 2 to 5 p.m. Proceeds of the fair will go to maintenance of the scout hall for the coming year.

Dr. E. N. Boettcher has been elected president of the Community Welfare Council of Greater Victoria, a Red Feather agency, it was announced today.

Roy E. L. Watson was elected vice-president; Mrs. M. Grayson Young, secretary; Gordon Taylor, treasurer.

Mr. Devereaux made further surveys of Indian lands in the Stewart Lake country in 1894 and Similkameen Valley (1900-2). He also did a great deal of exploration location work for the proposed British Pacific Railway in Kleena-Kleen River Valley and Bute Inlet and for the Kaslo and Slocan Railway in West Kootenay.

From 1903 to 1909 he was assistant city engineer for Victoria. During these years he made surveys of plans of all possible sources of water supplies for the city. These include Elk Lake, Goldstream waterworks and Sooke Lake.

First Engineer

In 1907 he became first engineer for Oak Bay and in this capacity was responsible for installing the first sewer system.

In 1909 Mr. Devereaux worked on the reconstruction of the Cariboo Road.

He is survived by two sisters and a brother.

A private funeral service will be held in Hayward's Chapel on Wednesday at 2 p.m. Rev. Canon George Biddle will officiate.

Cemetery Conspiracy Charged at Hearing

ON SPY PLANE

Envoy Puffed Three Times, Said Nothing

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

The nations of the West must continue to co-operate with the United States "regardless of any differences of opinion on the diplomatic front," says Sir Saville Garner, United Kingdom High Commissioner to Canada.

"We must obviously work together at all times," said the suave pipe-smoking British diplomat answering questions at a press conference in the Empress Hotel today.

Tall, good-humored Sir Saville gave reporters a lesson in British diplomacy by refusing the lightest comment on current delicate relations between Russia and the United States.

When asked if he thought the U.S. had caused "a threat" to world peace over the spy plane incident, he looked out of the window, puffed three times on his pipe and said nothing.

Eloquent

But he was eloquent and unrestrained when speaking of Anglo-Canadian relations.

"Britain's exports to Canada increased 45 per cent in the first quarter of this year while Canada's exports to the United Kingdom increased by 30 per cent."

"Our trading relations are improving all the time and our relations generally are better than they have ever been."

Sir Saville agreed that while there is "some unemployment" in Canada there is "practically none" in Britain. Britain, he said, needs all the skilled workers she can get but would never discourage immigration to Canada.

Why Stop Now?

"We have been sending our sons to Canada for 300 years," he said. "Why should we stop now?"

The high commissioner addressed a joint meeting of the men's and women's Canadian Clubs at the Empress Hotel this afternoon and emphasized that Britain's strength is largely due to her "open door" policy towards immigrants from other nations.

"This is particularly true of the Commonwealth nations," he said. "No British subject is ever refused entry to Britain or the right to work there, even though this sometimes causes inconvenience."

Speaking of his conference with Premier Bennett Monday, the high commissioner said he was "enthusiastic" over the premier's suggestion that British cars should be assembled in B.C.

The premier will have every opportunity of pursuing this idea," he said. "He will also see some of the fine new highways we are building in Britain to combat the alarming increase in traffic."

RUNNER-UP in the "Miss Civil Service, 1960" contest in Ottawa today is Myrna Hunter, 21, an attractive brunette who works with the Defence Research Board. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude F. Hunter, 363-Kinney, a graduate of Victoria College and an honors mathematics graduate of University of British Columbia. She will be one of two "princesses" to Diane Chevreton, 23, a government receptionist who was chosen Miss Civil Service and queen of the Ottawa Tulip Festival.

Fire Destroys Saanich Mill

An abandoned Central Saanich lumber mill, idle since 1954, burned to the ground at a loss estimated at $1,000 between 4:30 and 5 a.m. today.

The mill, on Omlinson Road, just off Stellis Cross Road, was owned by Dave Carson, a resident of Dallas, Oregon.

Central Saanich fire department was called out at 4:45 a.m. when neighboring residents noticed flames in the sky.

The blaze by then had gained a hold on the wooden structure and was beyond salvage.

There were certain items of machinery in the building, but according to the fire department they were of little value.

It was thought spontaneous combustion of decaying sawdust might have caused the fire.

$2,950 Given

To City Groups

By Koerner Fund

Grants totalling $2,950 have been made to Victoria's art gallery, symphony society and university by the Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation, it was announced today.

They are among 48 grants totalling $70,335 which the foundation has made to culture, education, health, welfare and medical research in British Columbia.

Victoria Art Gallery receives $1,250 for the purchase of pictures for loan to schools, art books to circulate to Vancouver Island centres, and an art reference encyclopedia for the gallery library.

Victoria Symphony Society receives $1,200 to present to two or three young Canadian guest artists with the symphony orchestra, and to add to the orchestra's music library.

The University of Victoria receives a grant of $500 for the development of fine arts.

'U.S. Grave Markers Forced on Public'

By FRANK RUTTER

A "cemetery conspiracy" against the public was charged here today before the Public Utilities Commission.

The PUC was asked to take action against an alliance between cemetery companies and a U.S. manufacturer of grave markers as it continued hearings started in Vancouver last Wednesday.

A Victoria monumental manufacturer's brief said the public was forced to buy grave markers made by a U.S. firm for Hatley Memorial Gardens in Colwood.

Mortimer's Monumental works, represented by lawyer Louis F. Lindholm, said that strict regulations by the cemetery assured that only memorial markers manufactured by Jas. H. Matthews and Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., could be used in the "gardens."

The monument manufacturer's brief also said the use of granite was prohibited by the regulations.

Other firms were kept out of the market by a rigid formula for the bronze composition of the markers, which consists of not less than 5 per cent tin, not more than 5 per cent zinc, 2 1/2 per cent lead, 1 per cent impurities.

The markers also had to conform to "hand chased ornamentation" with a cuprous oxide finish.

If anyone wished to use a marker not purchased from the cemetery it must have a certificate of analysis showing the bronze formula was used. Mr. Neill said this cost $39.

Another block to local competition was that an extra installation fee was charged for non-Pittsburgh markers, said the brief.

"Not only are these practices against the public interest, said the brief, 'but are especially abhorrent in this context because they invade an area of human relations formerly held sacred.'"

While the situation had been prevalent here only a few years, there had been a "monopoly" in the United States for a decade, said the brief.

$1 MILLION BUSINESS

It said 82 per cent of all U.S. cemetery bronze markers were supplied by the Pittsburgh firm which had a $4 million annual business.

The brief quoted a criminal indictment against the firm in a U.S. court for conspiracy.

The situation here, said the brief, "is startlingly similar."

"In order to ensure that there be no chicanery between the cemetery owners and the manufacturers of bronze memorials it is further submitted that regulations should be promulgated to prevent the owners of memorial park cemeteries from selling grave markers at all in competition with commercial dealers."

ONE RESTRICTION ONLY

The only restrictions desirable, it recommended, were those of size and shape.

Answering Mr. Neill's charges of high costs of bronze markers, Alan Macfarlane, representing Valley View Gardens and Memorial Gardens of Canada, both Vancouver firms, said: "My clients have a number of outside markers by outside manufacturers. They are quite willing to meet free competition provided it meets the standards laid down."

TRAFFIC FINES

In city police court today: Wilbert A. B. Jeeves, 412 Ker, previously fined for speeding over 30 and failing to obey a siren, restricted to business driving only for three months.

Walter W. Finley, 1239 Basil, $35 for careless driving.

Speedway Motors Ltd., 971 Yates, $20 for failing to give written consent for use of dealer licence.

Gerald Robert Irvine, 1537 Kings, $30 and licence suspension for speeding over 30.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. When a person wins a military decoration, VC, MC, MM, etc., does the person receiving the medal get a certificate, showing he won it? Where could one write to obtain such a certificate? R.S.T.

A. He or she would receive a copy of the citation leading to the award, either at the time of the investiture or after. To check if an individual medal is warranted, contact the Officer-in-Charge, War Records, Department of Veterans Affairs, Ottawa, Ont.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to dealers.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to The Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Policemen Accused of Brutality

VANCOUVER (CP)—City police were investigating today the claims of a Toronto Jeweller and a Vancouver warehouseman that they were beaten by police in city jail.

The investigation was started today under the supervision of Deputy Chief Constable Gordon Ambrose. The beatings allegedly took place early last Friday while the men were being held on drunk charges.

One of the men, Lionel Victor Bourgeault, 29, of Toronto, has signed a statutory declaration in which he declares he was assaulted. The other, Cliff Smith, 27, was to sign a similar declaration today. Both men were acquitted of the charges of drunkenness Saturday.

Poultrymen Ask Tariffs Against U.S.

OTTAWA (CP)—A delegation representing Ontario and Quebec poultry producers and processors urged the government today to raise tariffs against United States imports.

In a brief presented to Agriculture Minister Harkness and Finance Minister Fleming, the delegation said importation of dressed poultry from the United States has increased fourfold in the first four months of this year.

Bids Heard for Prince George TV

EDMONTON (CP)—The Board of Broadcast Governors today began its four-day Edmonton sitting by hearing opposing applications to set up a new television station in Prince George, B.C.

Seeking the new TV outlet are Aurora TV Limited and CKPG Television Limited. Both groups propose to broadcast on Channel 2.

One Dead, Six Hurt in Winnipeg Fire

WINNIPEG (CP)—One person died and six others were taken to hospital today when fire swept through a three-storey rooming-house in south-central Winnipeg.

Firemen and passers-by erected ladders to the second and third floors of the brick and frame structure as flames and smoke kept them from entering ground-floor doors and windows. Names of the victim and injured were not available.

Judge Bans Hardware Store Picketing

VANCOUVER (CP)—Picketing of the shipping door and driveway of a truck hardware firm was banned today by the B.C. Supreme Court.

The order was made by Mr. Justice A. M. Manson. It governs picketing by the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Workers Union at Fred C. Myers Ltd.

The firm said today police were called to clear a way through the picket line for a company truck to use the driveway. The union went on strike against wages.

Freeze-Up Eases Flood Danger

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP)—

Freezing temperatures slowed the rise of the swollen Mattagami River today and spurred hopes that a critical flooding situation in suburban Mountjoy Township had passed its peak.

But emergency crews remained on a constant alert in Mountjoy where nearly 700 persons were evacuated from homes Monday, many of them by boats along streets swirling with up to six feet of icy, dirty river water.

The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission reported water at its key dam at Wawa, 22 miles up stream, was holding its level.

The river was seven feet above normal at midnight, breaking the mark set in 1947, before many of Mountjoy's present residential areas were established.

Other areas of Ontario were also beset by floods. At Pembroke the Ottawa River reached its highest level in 10 years and was still rising.

Summer cottages were submerged to their window sills.

CANADA'S ROLE IN DEFENCE

By TOM GOULD

OTTAWA — Over the past 10 years Canadian defence policies have been increasingly subordinated to those of the United States. Today, Canada is a junior-grade military satellite of the U.S.

We have gone so far on the road to integration that a small group of U.S. congressmen can actually dictate the weapons that Canadian forces are to be equipped with.

Perhaps it was inevitable, considering the awesome power of the United States, that such integration would become a one-way street, that the word partnership applied to U.S.-Canadian defence would be a misnomer.

Evidence Clear

Anyone who doubts that such a situation exists should give careful study to the sorry story of the Bomarc-B anti-aircraft missile.

There are obvious reasons why Canada adopted the Bomarc-B for its "front line of defence," and not all of them have to do with the cost of the scrapped Avro Arrow interceptor.

A look at a map of North America will provide the explanation.

See how Ontario dips down into the Great Lakes, and how the lakes themselves push the U.S. border far to the south. U.S. defence planners, who at one time envisaged a chain of Bomarc stations running up the U.S. west coast, along the border, and down the east coast, were very concerned at the Great Lakes Gap.

Move Inevitable

The only way to fill the gap was to get Canada to install Bomarc bases of her own.

Did Canada want the Bomarc-B in the first place?

A day or two before Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced Canada was going to obtain the missile, this reporter had a discussion with Defence Minister Pearkes in his Centre-Block office. The Bomarc came up in the discussion, and here is what the defence minister said about it:

"I am not sold on the Bomarc."

The air force recommended against its acquisition, and there are recurring reports in Ottawa that the Defence Research Board told the government Bomarc would be obsolete before it was installed, if it managed to get airborne.

Certainly the alternatives were not pleasant.

The government could have continued the Avro Arrow interceptor, program, at some fabulous cost; or it could have

Protest Made
'Pleasantly'

(Times News Services)

MOSCOW—The Soviet Union protested formally to the United States today about the flying spy mission of the American U-2 jet plane allegedly shot down over Siberia May 1.

A news conference held at the U.S. Embassy disclosed that a protest note over the incident had been handed to American Charge d'Affaires Edward Fereers by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko during a "correct and pleasant" interview at the foreign ministry this morning.

But the circumstances surrounding its presentation indicated a Soviet softening of the propaganda barrage against the United States in view of next week's summit meeting in Paris.

U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson had a long talk with Khrushchev Monday night at a Czechoslovak reception in which he first broached the subject of seeing the pilot.

At the party, Khrushchev held Thompson's right hand between both of his while assuring the American he was positive Thompson personally knew nothing of the plane flight.

In a friendly tone, Khrushchev assured the ambassador that he felt sorry for him because of the spot he was put in as the U.S. representative.

This contrasted with Khrushchev's blunt outspokenness to the Norwegian ambassador, Oscar Gunderson.

"You knew about these flights," Khrushchev said to the Norwegian diplomat. "I can see it in your eyes."

If intelligence missions are continued over Soviet soil, the premier said in a speech Monday night at a Czechoslovak Embassy reception, "we shall bring them down," just bring them down.

"If such flights are repeated, we shall take appropriate counter-measures."

Amid his taunts at the U.S. government and his warnings, the premier also sounded a conciliatory note, saying:

"Our strength is being tested. Therefore let us not draw conclusions aggravating relations between countries, such conclusions as would hamper us in the future, even, I should like to say, in building good relations with the U.S.A."

Asked why he took about a dozen daffodils, Danchuk told the court he had seen others doing it.

Mrs. Daggett said she and her husband saw many people with flowers, and when they asked where they came from, were told the blooms had been trampled and broken by the crowd.

Those fined were Ethel Buchanan, 634 Admirals; Myrtle M. Daggett, 78 Wellington; Keith Reeves, 610 Michigan; and Michael L. Danchuk, 2621 Mount Stephen.

U.S. Atom Sub Triton Completes Historic Trip

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The White House announced today that the nuclear-powered submarine Triton had travelled 41,519 miles around the world in a historic 84-day voyage under water.

The Triton, largest submarine ever built, submerged off Montauk Point, Long Island, Feb. 16 and did not surface completely again until this morning off Rehoboth Beach, Del.

There, a helicopter picked up the Triton's commanding officer—Capt. Edward L. Beach of Palo Alto, Calif.—and flew him immediately to the White House where President Eisenhower conferred on him the Legion of Merit.

The Triton then proceeded to her home port of New London, Conn., where she was due Wednesday.

The historic voyage, known as "Operation Magellan," followed approximately the early 16th century course of the explorer Ferdinand Magellan whom history credits with making the first around-the-world cruise.

The 7,750-ton Triton, commissioned last Nov. 10, is about the size of a light cruiser and carries two atomic reactors and two entirely independent propulsion plants.

The Triton's skipper was Eisenhower's first naval aide at the White House. Beach has a distinguished record in the submarine service and is an outstanding author. His best-selling novel, "Run Silent, Run Deep," was a literary hit several seasons ago.

The President, in pinning the medal on Beach, hailed him for an "extraordinary accomplishment."

Beach was hustled secretly to the White House from his mammoth submarine which had surfaced before daybreak 12 miles off the Delaware coast.

His log had showed there was some difficulty with the submarine's diving planes and garbage ejection system and he was asked whether there were other difficulties during the trip.

"Yes, when the smoking lamp was out," Beach wrote, referring to a two-week period during the trip when smoking was banned by psychologists aboard the Triton.

"The psychologists suffered more than anyone else. They also like to smoke and the crew said they were a bunch of sadists."

The Triton was gone so long that SUPPORT PLEDGED ALLIES

U.S. Warns Russians
Not to Blast Bases

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States today pledged to support its Allies with force if Russia molests their bases for permitting U.S. reconnaissance flights.

State Department press officer Lincoln White said the U.S. would honor its commitments "for the common defence" of countries which "once again appear to be subjected to a policy of intimidation by the Soviet government."

The blunt statement was the U.S. answer to Soviet Premier Khrushchev's assertion that if more American flights are made over Russia from foreign bases "we shall hit at those bases."

Khrushchev declared at a reception in Moscow Monday night that Russia would shoot down any more U.S. planes invading her territory and would retaliate against other countries which let espionage planes use their bases.

He said the fact is the U-2 reconnaissance plane, which Russia claims to have shot down last week "developed some unforeseen and unavoidable mechanical or physiological defect."

Secretary of State Christian A. Herter indicated in a statement Monday this country would continue reconnaissance flights until the Soviets agree to international safeguards against surprise attacks.

White's statement was made at a news conference today in answer to reporters' questions. He speaks officially for the state department.

He praised the Central Intelligence Agency for arranging the flights.

Cannon, one of a group of Congressional leaders briefed secretly Monday on the spy mission by top administration officials, told the House that in addition to the essential military information they turned up, the flights completely disproved Russia's claimed ability to stop American bombers at her borders.

FRANCIS POWERS
TO TRY
U.S. FLIER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Russia has informed the United States that the captured American spy pilot will be brought to trial under Soviet law.

The state department declined to make public the text, saying it believed Moscow would make it known.

Informed officials said, however, that the note advised that the pilot, 30-year-old Francis G. Powers, would be brought to account under Soviet law.

It also was disclosed that in return the United States has formally requested an interview with Powers.

Khrushchev has said that officials will be permitted to see Powers "in due course."

American officials said all that was contemplated was to ask about Powers' welfare, how he was treated and if he has legal assistance. There would be no "cross-examination" of him on accounts of the incident.

Seems logical that th' plane spyin' on Russia was a "U-2."

Guess them submarine fellers found there ain't much use writin' under water, if y' can't mail it home.

Mister Khrushchev's tryin' t' hit a home run with th' missile bases loaded.
